INTERESTING NARRATIVE OF THELIFE OF OLAUDAH EQUIANO, OR GUSTAVUS VASSA, THE AFRICAN. WRITTEN BY HIMSELF. VOL. II.

тне

Behold, God is my falvation; I will trust and not be afraid, for the Lord Jebowah is my strength and my fong; he also is become my falvation.

An.l in that day shall ye fay, Praife the Lord, call upon his name, declare his doings among the people. Itaiah xii, 2, 4.

LONDON:

Printed for and fold by the AUTHOR, No. 10, Union-Street, Middlefex-Hofpital.

Sold alfo by Mr. Johnfon, St. Paul's Church-Yard; Mr. Murray, Fleet-Street; Meffrs. Robion and Clark, Bond-Street; Mr. Davis, oppofite Gray's-Inn, Holborn; Meffrs.
Shepperfon and Reynolds, and Mr. Jackfon. Oxford-Street; Mr. Lackington, Chifwell-Street; Mr. Mathews, Strand; Mr. Murray, Prince's-Street, Soho; Meff. Taylor and Co. South Arch, Royal Exchange; Mr. Button, Newington-Caufeway; Mr Palfons, Paternoffer-Row; and may be had of all the Bookfeliers in Town and Country.

[Entered at Statione.'s Hall.]

•

C O N T E N T S 0 1 VOLUME II.

CHAP. VII. Page The author's difguft at the West Indies-Forms schemes to obtain his freedom -I

CHAP. VIII.

Three remarkable dreams—The author is shipterecked on the Bahama-bank

CHAP. IX.

The author arrives at Martinico-Meets with new difficulties, and fails for England -72 CHAP. X.

Some account of the manner of the author's conversion to the faith of Jesus Chrift • 115

CHAP_

36

CONTENTS. : CHAP. XI. Page Picking up eleven miserable men at Jea in - 160 returning to England -

CHAP. XII.

.

Different transactions of the author's life -Petition to the Queen-Conclusion 215

٠.

T'HELIFE, &c.

C H A P. VII.

The author's difguft at the Weft Indies— Forms febrmes to obtain his freedom— Ludicrous difuppointment he and his Captain meet with in Georgia—At laft, by feveral fuccefsful voyages, he acquires a fum of money fufficient to purchafe it— Applies to his mafter, who accepts it, and grants his manumiflion, to his great joy— He afterwards enters as a freeman on board one of Mr. King's fhips, and fails for Georgia—Impofitions on free negroes as ufual—His venture of turkies—Sails Vol. II. B for Montferrat, and on his paffage his friend, the Captain, falls ill and dies.

[2]

EVERY day now brought me nearer my freedom, and I was impatient till we proceeded again to fea, that I might have an opportunity of getting a fum large enough to purchase it. I was not long ungratified; for, in the begining of the year 1766, my mafter bought another floop, named the Nancy, the largest I had ever seen. She was partly laden, and was to proceed to Philadelphia; our Captain had his choice of three, and I was well pleafed he chofe this, which was the largest; for, from his having a large veffel, I had more room, and could carry a larger quantity of goods with me. Accordingly, when we had delivered our old vessel, the Prudence, and completed the lading of the Nancy, having made near three hundred per cent. by four barrels of pork pork I brought from Charlestown, I faid in as large a cargo as I could, truffing sto God's providence to profper my undertaking. With these views I failed for Philadelphia. On our passage, when we drew near the land, I was for the first time furprised at the fight of some whales, having never feen any fuch large fea monsters before; and as we failed by the land one morning I faw a puppy whale close by the veffel; it was about the length of a wherry boat, and it followed us all the day till we got within the Capes. We arrived fafe and in good time at Philadelphia, and I fold my goods there chiefly to the quakers. They always appeared to be a very honeft discreet sort of people, and never attempted to impose on me; I therefore liked them, and ever after chose to deal with them in preference to any others. One Sunday morning while I was here, as I was going to church, I chanced to B 2 pais país a meeting-house. The doors being open, and the house full of people, it excited my curiofity to go in. When I entered the houfe, to my great furprife, I faw a very tall woman standing in the midft of them, fpeaking in an audible voice fomething which I could not understand. Having never seen any thing of this kind before, I ftood and ftared , about me for fome time, wondering at this odd fcene. As foon as it was over I took an opportunity to make inquiry about the place and people, when I was informed they were called Quakers. I particularly afked what that woman I faw in the midst of them had faid, but none of them were pleafed to fatisfy me; fo I quitted them, and foon after, as I was returning, I came to a church crowded with people; the church-yard was full likewife, and a number of people were even mounted on ladders, looking looking in at the windows. I thought this a strange fight, as I had never feen churches, either in England or the Weft Indies, crowded in this manner before. I therefore made bold to alk fome people the meaning of all this, and they told me the Rev. Mr. George Whitfield was preaching. I had often heard of this gentleman, and had wifhed to fee and hear him; but I had never before had an opportunity. I now therefore refolved to gratify myfelf with the fight, and I prefied in amidst the multitude. When I got into the church I faw this pious man exhorting the people with the . greateft fervour and earneftnefs, and fweating as much as I ever did while inflavery on Montferrat beach. I wasvery much ftruck and impressed with this; I thought it strange I had never feen divines exert themselves in this manner before, and I was no longer at a lofs to account for the thin congre-B 3 gations gations they preached to. When we had discharged our cargo here, and were loaded again, we left this fruitful land once more, and fet fail for Montferrat. My traffic had hitherto fucceeded fo well with me, that I thought, by felling my goods when we arrived at Montferrat, I should have enough to purchase my freedom. But, as soon as our vessel arrived there, my master came on board, and gave orders for us. to ge to St. Euflatia, and discharge our cargo there, and from thence proceed for Georgia. I was much disappointed: at this; but thinking, as usual, it was of no use to encounter with the decrees of fate, I submitted without repining, and we went to St. Eustatia. After we had difcharged our cargo there we took. in a live cargo, as we call a cargo of flaves. Here I fold my goods tolerably well; but, not being able to lay out all my money in this fmall island to as. much much advantage as in many other places, I laid out only part, and the remainder I brought away with me neat. We failed from hence for Georgia, and I was glad when we got there, though I had not much reason to like the place from my last adventure in Savannah; but I longed to get back to Moniferrat and procure my freedom, which I expected to be able to purchase when I returned. As foon as we arrived here I waited on my careful doctor, Mr. Brady, to whom I made the most grateful acknowledgments in my power for his former kindness and attention during. my illnefs. While we were here an odd circumstance happened to the Captain and me, which difappointed us both agood deal. A filversmith, whom we had brought to this place fome voyages before, agreed with the Captain to return with us to the West Indies, and promised at the same time to give the Captain B4

[3]

[4]

[5]

۰,

[6]

[7]

[8]

Captain a great deal of money, having pretended to take a liking to him, and being, as we thought, very rich. But while we flayed to load our vessel this man was taken ill in a houfe where he worked, and in a week's time became very bad. The worfe he grew the more he used to speak of giving the Captain what he had promifed him, fo that he expected something confiderable from the death of this man, who had no wife or child, and he attended him day and night. I used also to go with the Captain, at his own defire, to attend him; efpecially when we faw there was no appearance of his recovery : and, in order to recompense me for my trouble, the Captain promised me ten pounds, when he fhould get the man's property. I thought this would be of great fervice to me, although I had nearly money enough to purchase my freedom, if I should get safe this voyage to Montserrat. In

[9]

1

In this expectation I laid out above? eight pounds of my money for a suit of fuperfine clothes to dance with at my. freedom, which I hoped was then at hand. We ftill continued to attend this man, and were with him even on the last day he lived, till very late at night, when we went on board. After we were got to bed, about one or two o'clock in the morning, the Captain was fent for, and informed the man wasdead. On this he came to my bed, and, waking me, informed me of it, and defired me to get up and procure. a light, and immediately go to him. told him I was very fleepy, and wishedhe would take fomebody elfe with him; or else, as the man was dead, and could want no farther attendance, to let all. things remain as they were till the next morning. 'No, no,' faid he, 'we will. · have the money to-night, I cannot wait ' till to-morrew; fo let us go.' Accordingly B 5

[10]

ingly I got up and flruck a light, and away we both went and faw the man as dead as we could with. The Captain faid he would give him a grand burial, in gratitude for the promised treasure; and defired that all the things belonging to the deceased might be brought forth. Among others, there was a neft of trunks of which he had kept the keys whilst the man was ill, and when they were produced we opened them with no fmall eagerness and expectation; and as there were a great number within one another, with much impatience we took them one out of the other. At laft, when we came to the fmalleft, and had opened it, we faw it was full of papers, which we supposed to be notes; at the fight of which our hearts leapt for joy; and that inftant the Captain, clapping his hands, cried out, 'Thank 'God, here it is.' But when we took up the trunk, and began to examine the fuppofed fupposed treasure and long-looked-for bounty, (alas! alas! how uncertain and deceitful are all human affairs!) what had we found! While we thought we were embracing a substance we grasped an empty nothing. The whole amount that was in the neft of trunks was only one dollar and a half; and all that the man possessed would not pay for his coffin. Our fudden and exquifite joy was now fucceeded by as fudden and exquifite pain; and my Captain and I exhibited, for some time, most ridiculous figures-pictures of chagrin and difappointment! We went away greatly mortified, and left the deceased to do as well as he could for himfelf, as we had taken fo good care of him when alive for nothing. We fet fail once more for Montserrat, and arrived there fafe; but much out of humour with our friend the filversmith. When we had unladen the vessel, and I had fold my venture, finding B 6

[11]

[12]

- 19.

ing myself master of about forty-seven pounds, I confulted my true friend, the Captain, how I should proceed in offering my master the money for my freedom. He told me to come on a certain morning, when he and my mafter would be at breakfast together. Accordingly, on that morning I went, and met the Captain there, as he had appointed. When I went in I made my obeifance to my mafter, and with my money in my hand, and many fears in my heart, I prayed him to be as good as his offer to me, when he was pleafed to promise me my freedom as soon as I could purchase it. This speech seemed to confound him; he began to recoil: and my heart that inflant funk within me. 'What,' faid he, 'give you your 'freedom? Why, where did you get 'the money? Have you got forty 'pounds fterling?' 'Yes, fir,' I anfwered. 'How did you get it?' replied plied he. I told him, very honeffly. The Captain then faid he knew I got the money very honeftly and with much industry, and that I was particularly careful. On which my master replied, I got money much faster thanhe did; and faid he would not have made me the promife he did if he had thought I should have got money fofoon. 'Come, come,' faid my worthy Captain, clapping my mafter on the back, 'Come, Robert, (which was his-' name) I think you must let him have ' his freedom; you have laid your mo-' ney out very well; you have received. ' good interest for it all this time, and here is now the principal at laft. I · know Guftavus has earned you more ' than an hundred a-year, and he will fill fave you money, as he will not · leave you :-- Come, Robert, take the 'money.' My master then faid, hewould not be worfe than his promife; and, ٠.

[13] "

[14]

and, taking the money, told me to go to the Secretary at the Register Office, and get my manumillion drawn up. These words of my master were like a voice from heaven to me : in an infant all my trepidation was turned into unutterable blifs; and I moit reverently bowed myself with gratitude, unable toexpress my feelings, but by the overflowing of my eyes, while my true and worthy friend, the Capiain, congratulated us both with a peculiar degree of. heart-felt pleafure. As foon as the first transports of my joy were over, and that I had expressed my thanks to these my worthy friends in the beft manner I wasable, I rofe with a heart full of affection and reverence, and left the room, in order to obey my master's joyful mandate of going to the Register Of-As I was leaving the house I fice. called to mind the words of the Pfalmift, · in the 126th Pfalm, and like him, 'I ' glorified

e glorified God in my heart, in whom I • trufted.' These words had been imprefled on my mind from the very day I was forced from Deptford to the prefent hour, and I now faw them, as Ithought, fulfilled and verified. My imagination was all rapture as I flew to. the Register Office, and, in this respect, like the apostle Peter, * (whose deliverance from prifon was fo fudden and extraordinary, that he thought he was in. a vision) I could fcarcely believe I wasawake. Heavens! who could do juffice to my feelings at this moment! Not conquering heroes themselves, in the midst of a triumph-Not the tender mother who has just regained her longloft infant, and preffes it to her heart-Not the weary hungry mariner, at the fight of the defired friendly port-Not the lover, when he once more embraces his beloved miftrefs, after fhe had been ravifhed from his arms!—All within my breaft was tumult, wildnefs, and delirium! My feet fcarcely touched the ground, for they were winged with joy, and, like Elijah, as he rofe to Heaven, they ' were with lightning fped as I ' went on.' Every one I met I told of my happinefs, and blazed about the virtue of my amiable mafter and captain.

* Acts, chap. xii. ver. 9.

[16]

When I got to the office and acquainted the Register with my errand he congratulated me on the occasion, and told me he would draw up my manumission for half price, which was a guinea. I thanked him for his kindnefs; and, having received it and paid him, I hastened to my master to get him to fign it, that I might be fully released. Accordingly he figned the manumission thatday, so that, before night, I who had been a flave in the morning, trembling at [17].

at the will of another, was become my own mafter, and completely free. I thought this was the happieft day I had ever experienced; and my joy was ftill heightened by the bleffings and prayers of the fable race, particularly the aged, to whom my heart had ever been attached with reverence.

As the form of my manumifion has fomething peculiar in it, and expresses the absolute power and dominion one man claims over his fellow, I shall beg leave to present it before my readers at full length :

Montferrat.—To all men unto whom thefe prefents shall come: I Robert King, of the parish of St. Anthony in the faid island, merchant, send greeting: Know ye, that I the aforesaid Robert

[18]

Bert King, for and in confideration of the fum of feventy pounds current money of the faid island, to me in hand paid, and to the intent that a negro man-flave, named Guftavus Vassa, shall and may become free, have manumitted, emancipated, enfranchifed, and fet free, and by these presents do manumit, emancipate, enfranchise, and set free, the aforesaid negro man-flave, named Guftavus Vaffa, for ever, hereby giving, granting, and releasing unto him, the faid Gustavus Vassa, all right, title, dominion, fovereignty, and property, which, as lord and mafter over the aforefaid Guftavus Vaffa, I had, or now I have, or by any means whatfoever I may or can hereafter poffibly have over him the aforefaid negro, for over. In witnefs whereof I the abovefaid Robert King have unto these prefents set my hand and seal, this tenthday of July, in the year of our Lord! one [19] one thousand seven hundred and fixtyfix.

ROBERT KANG.

Signed, fealed, and delivered in the prefence of Terrylegay, Montferrat.

Registered the within manumission at full length, this eleventh day of July, 1766, in liber D. TERRYLEGAY, Register.

In fhort, the fair as well as blackpeople immediately flyled me by a new appellation, to me the moft defirable inthe world, which was Freeman, and atthe dances I gave my Georgia fuperfine blue clothes made no indifferent appearance, as I thought. Some of the¹ table females, who formerly flood aloof, now began to relax and appear lefs coy; but my heart was flill fixed on London, where where I hoped to be ere long. So. that my worthy captain and his owner, my late master, finding that the bent of my mind was towards London, faid to me, 'We hope you won't leave us, but ' that you will full be with the veffels.' Here gratitude bowed me down; and none but the generous mind can judge of my feelings, struggling between inclination and duty. However, notwithstanding my with to be in London, I obediently answered my benefactors that I would go in the veffel, and not leave them; and from that day I was entered on board as an able-bodied failor, at thirty-fix shillings per month, besides what perquisites I could make. My intention was to make a voyage or two, entirely to pleafe thefe my honoured patrons; but I determined that the year following, if it pleafed God, I would fee Old England once more, and surprise my old master, Capt. Pascal, wha who was hourly in my mind; for I still loved him, notwithstanding his usage of me, and I pleafed myfelf with thinking of what he would fay when he faw what the Lord had done for me in fo short a time, instead of being, as he might perhaps suppose, under the cruel yoke of fome planter. With these kind of reveries I used often to entertain myfelf, and shorten the time till my return; and now, being as in my original free African state, I embarked on board the Nancy, after having got all things ready for our voyage. In this flate of ferenity we failed for St. Euflatia; and, having fmcoth feas and calm weather, we foon arrived there : after taking our cargo on board, we proceeded to Savannah in Georgia, in August, 1766. While we were there, as usual, I used to go for the cargo up the rivers in boats; and on this bufinefs I have been frequently befet by alligators, which were very [22]

[20]

[21]

wery numerous on that coaft, and I have fhot many of them when they have been near getting into our boats; which we .have with great difficulty fometimes prevented, and have been very much frightened at them. I have seen a young one fold in Georgia alive for fix pence. During our flay at this place, one evening a flave belonging to Mr. Read, a merchant of Savannah, came near our vessel, and began to use me very ill. I entreated him, with all the patience I was master of, to defist, as I knew there was little or no law for a free negro here; but the fellow, instead of taking my advice, perfevered in his -infults, and even ftruck me. At this I loft all temper, and I fell on him and beat him foundly. The next morning his mafter came to our veffel as we lay alongfide the wharf, and defired me to come ashore that he might have me fogged all round the town, for beating I his his negro flave. I told him he had in? fulted me, and had given the provocation, by first striking me. I had told my captain also the whole affair that morning, and wished him to have gone along with me to Mr. Read, to prevent bad consequences; but he faid that it did not fignify, and if Mr. Read faid any thing he would make matters up, and had defired me to go to work, which I accordingly did. The Captain being on board when Mr. Read came, he told him I was a free man; and when Mr. Read applied to him to deliver me up, he said he knew nothing of the matter. I was aftonished and frightened at this, and thought I had better keep where I was than go ashore and be flogged round the town, without judge or jury. I therefore refused to flir; and Mr. Read went away, fwearing he would bring all the conftables in the town, for he would have me me out of the vessel. When he was gone, I thought his threat might prove τοο true to my forrow; and I was confirmed in this belief, as well by the many inftances I had feen of the treatment of free negroes, as from a fact that had happened within my own knowledge here a short time before. There was a free black man, a carpenter, that I knew, who, for asking a gentleman that he worked for for the money he had earned, was put into gaol; and afterwards this oppressed man was sent from Georgia, with false accusations, of an intention to fet the gentleman's house on fire, and run away with his flaves. I was therefore much embarrassed, and very apprehensive of a flogging at least. I dreaded; of all things, the thoughts of being ftriped, as I never in my life had the marks of any violence of that kind. At that inftant a rage feized my foul, and for a little 3

[23]

[24]

[25]

little I determined to resist the first man that should offer to lay violent hands on me, or basely use me without a trial; for I would sooner die like a free man, than fuffer myfelf to be fcourged by the hands of ruffians, and my blood drawn like a flave. The captain and others, more cautious, advised me to make hafte and conceal myfelf; for they faid Mr. Read was a very fpiteful man, and he would foon come on board with conflables and take me. At first I refused this counfel, being determined to fland my ground; but at length, by the prevailing entreaties of the captain and Mr. Dixon, with whom he lodged, I went to Mr. Dixon's house, which was a little out of town, at a place called Yea-ma-chra. I was but just gone when Mr. Read, with the conftables, came for me, and fearched the veffel; but, not finding me there, he fwore he would have me dead or alive. I was fecreted VOL. II. С fecreted about five days; however, the good character which my captain always gaveme as well as fome other gentlemen who alfo knew me, procured me fome friends. At last fome of them told my captain that he did not use me well, in fuffering me thus to be imposed upon, and faid they would fee me redreffed, and get me on board fome other vessel. My captain, on this, immediately went to Mr. Read, and told him, that ever fince I eloped from the veffel his work had been neglected, and he could not go on with her loading, himself and mate not being well; and, as I had managed things on board for them, my absence must retard his voyage, and confequently hurt the owner; he therefore begged of him to forgive me, as he faid he never had any complaint of me before, for the many years that I had been with him. After repeated entreaties, Mr. Read faid I might go to hell, and that

T 26 T

[27]

that he would not meddle with me; on which my captain came immediately to me at his lodging, and, telling me how pleafantly matters had gone on, he defired me to go on board. Some of my other friends then asked him if he had got the constable's warrant from them; the captain faid, No. On this I was defired by them to flay in the house; and they faid they would get me on board of fome other veffel before the evening. When the captain heard this he became almost distracted. He went immediately for the warrant, and, after using every exertion in his power, he at last got it from my hunters; but I had all the expenses to pay. After I had thanked all my friends for their attention, I went on board again to my work, of which I had always plenty. We were in haste to complete our lading, and were to carry twenty head of cattle with us to the Weft Indies, where C 2 they they are a very profitable article. In order to encourage me in working, and to make up for the time I had loft, my captain promifed me the privilege of carrying two bullocks of my own with me; and this made me work with redoubled ardour. As foon as I had got the veffel loaded, in deing which I was obliged to perform the duty of the mate as well as my own work, and that the bullocks were near coming on board, I asked the captain leave to bring my two, according to his promife; but, to my great surprise, he told me there was no room for them. I then asked him to permit me to take one; but he faid he could not. I was a good deal mortified at this usage, and told him I had no notion that he intended thus to impose on me; nor could I think well of any man that was fo much worfe than his word. On this we had fome difagreement, and I gave him to underftand, stand, that I intended to leave the veffel. At this he appeared to be very much dejected; and our mate, who had been very fickly, and whofe duty had long devolved upon me, advised him to perfuade me to flay : in confequence of which he fpoke very kindly to me, making many fair promises, telling me that, as the mate was fo fickly, he could not do without me, and that, as the fafety of the veffel and cargo depended greatly upon me, he therefore hoped that I would not be offended at what had paffed between us, and fwore he would make up all matters when we arrived in the Weft Indies; fo I confented to flave on as before. Soon after this, as the bullocks were coming on board, one of them ran at the captain, and butted him fo furioufly in the breaft, that he never recovered of the blow. In order to make me fome amends for his treatment about the bul-C 3 locks, locks, the captain now preffed me very much to take fome turkeys, and other fowls, with me, and gave me liberty to take as many as I could find room for: but I told him he knew very well I had never carried any turkeys before, as I always thought they were fuch tender Lirds that they were not fit to crofs the ieas. However, he continued to preis me to buy them for once; and, what was very furprifing to me, the more I was against it, the more he urged my taking them, infomuch that he enfored me from all losses that might happen by them, and I was prevailed on to take them; but I thought this very ftrange, as he had never acted fo with me before. This, and not being able to difpose of my paper-money in any other way, induced me at length to take four dozen. The turkeys, however, I was fo diffatisfied about that I determined to make no more voyages to this quarter,

[28]

[29]

Ë 30]

[31]

ter, nor with this captain; and was very apprehensive that my free voyage would be the worft I had ever made. We set sail for Montserrat. The captain and mate had been both complaining of ficknefs when we failed, and as we proceeded on our voyage they grew worfe. This was about November, and we had not been long at fea before we began to meet with strong northerly gales and rough feas; and in about feven or eight days all the bullocks were near being drowned, and four or five of them died. Our vessel, which had not been tight at first, was much less fo now; and, though we were but nine in the whole, including five failors and myself, yet we were obliged to attend to the pumps every half or three quarters of an hour. The captain and mate came on deck as often as they were able, which was now but feldom; for they declined fo fast, that they were not C 4 well well enough to make observations above four or five times the whole voyage. The whole care of the veffel refted, therefore, upon me, and I was obliged to direct her by my former experience, not being able to work a traverfe. The captain was now very forry he had not taught me navigation, and protefled, if ever he fhould get well again, he would not fail to do so; but in about seventeen days his illnefs increased fo much, that he was obliged to keep his bed, continuing senfible, however, till the laft, conftantly having the owner's interest at heart; for this just and benevolent man ever appeared much concerned about the welfare of what he was intrusted with. When this dear friend found the fymptoms of death. approaching, he called me by my name; and, when I came to him, he asked (with almost his last breath) if he had ever done me any harm? 'God forbid • I fhould

[32]

[33]

I fhould think fo,' I replied, 'I fhould then be the moft ungrateful of wretches to the beft of benefactors.' While I was thus expressing my affection and forrow by his bedfide, he expired without faying another word; and the day following we committed his body to the deep. Every man on board loved this man, and regretted his death; but I was exceedingly affected at it, and I found that I did not know, till he was gone, the ftrength of my regard for him. Indeed I had every reafon in the world to be attached to him; for, befides that he was in general mild, affable, generous, faithful, benevolent, and juft, he was to me a friend and a father; and, had it pleafed Providence that he had died but five months before, I verily believe I fhould not have obtained my freedom when I did; and it is not improbable that I might not have been able to get it at any rate afterwards. C_5 The

[34]

The captain being dead, the mate came on the deck, and made fuch observations as he was able, but to no purpose. In the course of a few days more, the few bullocks that remained were found dead; but the turkies I had, though on the deck, and exposed to fo much wet and bad weather, did well, and I afterwards gained near three hundred per cent. on the fale of them; fo that in the event it proved a happy circumftance for me that I had not bought the bullocks I intended, for they must have perished with the rest; and I could not help looking on this, otherwise trifling circumstance, as a particular providence of God, and I was thankful accordingly. The care of the vessel took up all my time, and engaged my attention entirely. As we were now out of the variable winds, I thought I should not be much puzzled to hit upon the iflands. I was perfuaded I steered right right for Antigua, which I wished to reach, as the nearest to us; and in the courfe of nine or ten days we made this island, to our great joy; and the next day after we came safe to Montferrat. Many were furprifed when they heard of my conducting the floop into the port, and I now obtained a new appelation, and was called Captain. This elated me not a little, and it was quite flattering to my vanity to be thus flyled by as high a title as any free man in this place possessed. When the death of the captain became known, he was much regretted by all who knew him; for he was a man univerfally refpected. At the fame time the fable captain loft no fame; for the fuccefs I had met with increased the affection of my friends in no fmall meafure.

[35]

С 6 СНАР.

[36]

CHAP. VIII.

The author, to oblige Mr. King, once more embarks for Georgia in one of his veffels-A new captain is appointed-They fail, and fleer a new tour fe-Three remarkable dreams-The weffel is shipwrecked on the Bahama bank, but the crew are preferved, principally by means of the author-He sets out from the island with the captain, in a small boat, in quest of a ship — Their distress — Meet with a wrecker - Sail for Providence - Are overtaken again by a terrible florm, and are all near peristing—Arrive at New Providence -The author, after some time, Jails from thence to Georgia—Meets with another storm, and is obliged to put back and refit—Arrives at Georgia—Meets new impolitions-Two white men attempt 10 to kidnap him—Officiates as a parfon at a funeral ceremony—Bids adieu to Georgia, and fails for Martinico.

As I had now, by the death of my captain, loft my great benefactor and friend, I had little inducement to remain longer in the West Indies, except my gratitude to Mr. King, which I thought I had pretty well discharged in bringing back his veffel fafe, and delivering his cargo to his fatisfaction. I began to think of leaving this part of the world, of which I had been long tired, and returning to England, where my heart had always been; but Mr. King still pressed me very much to ftay with his veffel; and he had done fo much for me that I found myfelf unable to refuse his requests, and confented to go another voyage to Georgia, as the mate, from his ill state of health, was quite useles in the veffel. Accord ingly ingly a new captain was appointed, whofe name was William Phillips, an old acquaintance of mine; and, having refitted our vessel, and taken several flaves on board, we fet fail for St. Eustatia, where we stayed but a few days; and on the 30th of January 1767 we steered for Georgia. Our new captain boasted strangely of his skill in navigating and conducting a vessel; and in consequence of this he sleered a new course, several points more to the westward than we ever did before; this appeared to me very extraordinary. On the fourth of February, which was soon after we had got into our new courfe, I dreamt the ship was wrecked amidst the furfs and rocks, and that I was the means of faving every one on board; and on the night following I dreamed the very same dream. These dreams however made no impression on my mind; and the next evening, it being

[38]

[39]

ing my watch below, I was pumping the vessel a little after eight o'clock, just before I went off the deck, as is the cuftom; and being weary with the duty of the day, and tired at the pump, (for we made a good deal of water) I began to express my impatience, and I uttered with an oath, ' Damn the ' veffel's bottom out.' But my confcience inftantly fmote me for the expreffion. When I left the deck I went to bed, and had scarcely fallen asleep when I dreamed the fame dream again about the fhip that I had dreamt the two preceeding nights. At twelve o'clock the watch was changed; and, as I had always the charge of the captain's watch, 1 then went upon deck. At half after one in the morning the man at the helm faw fomething under the lee-beam that the fea washed against, and he immediately called to me that there was a grampus, and defired me to

[40]

to look at it. Accordingly I flood up and observed it for some time; but, when I faw the fea wafh up against it again and again, I faid it was not a fish but a rock. Being soon certain of this, I went down to the captain, and, with fome confusion, told him the danger we were in, and defired him to come upon deck immediately. He faid it was very well, and I went up again. As foon as I was upon deck the wind, which had been pretty high, having abated a little, the veffel began to be carried fideways towards the rock, by means of the current. Still the captain did not appear. I therefore went to him again, and told him the veffel was then near a large rock, and defired he would come up with fpeed. He faid he would, and I returned to the deck. When I was upon the deck again I faw we were not above a piftol fhot from the rock, and I heard the noile noise of the breakers all arounds us. I was exceedingly alarmed at this; and the captain having not yet come on the deck I loft all patience; and, growing quite enraged, I ran down to him again, and asked him why he did not come up, and what he could mean by all this? ' The breakers,' faid I, ' are round us, ' and the veficl is almost on the rock.' With that he came on the deck with me, and we tried to put the veficl about, and get her out of the current, but all to no purpose, the wind being very small. We then called all hands up immediately; and after a little we got up one end of a cable, and fastened it to the anchor. By this time the furf was foaming round us, and made a dreadful noise on the breakers, and the very moment we let the anchor go the vefici ftruck against the rocks. One fwell now fucceeded another, as it were one wave calling on its its fellow : the roaring of the billows increased, and, with one single heave of the swells, the floop was pierced and transfixed among the rocks! In a moment a scene of horror presented itself to my mind, fuch as I never had conceived or experienced before. All my fins stared me in the face; and especially, I thought that God had hurled his direful vengeance on my guilty head for curfing the veffel on which my life depended. My spirits at this forfook me, and I expected every moment to go to the bottom: I determined if I should still be faved that I would never fwear again. And in the midst of my distress, while the dreadful furfs were dashing with unremitting fury among the rocks, I remembered the I.ord, though fearful that I was undeferving of forgiveness, and I thought that as he had often delivered he might yet deliver; and, calling to mind the many many mercies he had shewn me in times past, they gave me some small hope that he might still help me. I then began to think how we might be faved ; and I believe no mind was ever like mine fo replete with inventions and confused with schemes, though how to escape death I knew not. The captain immediately ordered the hatches to be nailed down on the flaves in the. hold, where there were above twenty, all of whom must unavoidably have perished if he had been obeyed. When he desired the man to nail down the hatches I thought that my fin was the cause of this, and that God would charge me with these people's blood. This thought rushed upon my mindthat inftant with fuch violence, that it quite overpowered me, and I fainted. I recovered just as the people were about to nail down the hatches; perceiving which, I defired them to ftop. The

[4^I]

[42]

[43]

[44]

The captain then faid it must be done: I afked him why? He faid that every one would endeavour to get into the boat, which was but fmall, and thereby we should be drowned; for it would not have carried above ten at the moft. I could no longer reftrain my emotion, and I told him he deferved drowning for not knowing how to navigate the veffel; and I believe the people would have toffed him overboard if I had given them the least hint of it. However the hatches were not nailed down; and, as none of us could leave the veffel then on account of the darknefs, and as we knew not where to go, and were convinced befides that the boat could not furvive the furfs, we all faid we would remain on the dry part of the veffel, and truft to God till daylight appeared, when we flould know better what to do.

I then advifed to get the boat prepared

[45]

pared against morning, and some of us began to set about it; but some abandoned all care of the ship and themfelves, and fell to drinking. Our boat had a piece out of her bottom near two feet long, and we had no materials to mend her; however, necessity being the mother of invention, I took some pump leather and nailed it to the broken part, and plastered it over with tallow-greafe. And, thus prepared, with the utmost anxiety of mind we watched for day-light, and thought every minute an hour till it appeared. At last it saluted our longing eyes, and kind Providence accompanied its approach with what was no fmall comfort to us; for the dreadful fwell began to subfide; and the next thing that we discovered to raise our drooping spirits, was a'small key or island, about five or fix miles off; but a barrier foon presented itself; for there was not water water enough for our boat to go over the reefs, and this threw us again into a fad conflernation; but there was no alternative, we were therefore obliged to put but few in the boat at once; and, what is still worse, all of us were frequently under the necessity of getting out to drag and lift it over the reefs. This coft us much labour and fatigue; and, what was yet more diftreffing, we could not avoid having our legs cut and torn very much with the rocks. There were only four people that would work with me at the oars; and they confifted of three black men and a Dutch creole failor; and, though we went with the boat five times that day, we had no others to affist us. But, had we not worked in this manner, I really believe the pcople could not have been faved; for not one of the white men did any thing to pieferve their lives; and indeed they leon foon got fo drunk that they were not able, but lay about the deck like fwine, fo that we were at laft obliged to lift them into the boat and carry them on fhore by force. This want of affiftance made our labour intolerably fevere; infomuch, that, by putting on fhore fo often that day, the fkin was entirely ftript off my hands.

[46]

[47]

However, we continued all the day to toil and ftrain our exertions, till we had brought all on board fafe to the fhore; fo that out of thirty-two people we loft not one. My dream now returned upon my mind with all its force; it was fulfilled in every part; for our danger was the fame I had dreamt of: and I could not help looking on myfelf as the principal inftrument in effecting our deliverence; for, owing to fome of our people getting drunk, the reft of us were obliged to double our exertions; and it was fortunate we did, did, for in a very little time longer the patch of leather on the boat would have been worn out, and fhe would have been no longer fit for service. Situated as we were, who could think that men fhould be fo careless of the danger they were in? for, if the wind had but raifed the fwell as it was when the veffel struck, we must have bid a final farewell to all hopes of deliverance; and though, I warned the people who were drinking and entreated them to embrace the moment of deliverance, neverthelefs they perfisted, as if not possessed of the least spark of reason. I could not help thinking, that, if any of these people had been loft, God would charge me with their lives, which, perhaps, was one cause of my labouring so hard for their prefervation, and indeed every one of them afterwards feemed fo fenfible of the fervice I had rendered them, 5

[48]

[49]

them; and while we were on the key I was a kind of chieftain amongft them. I brought fome limes, oranges, and lemons ashore; and, finding it to be a good foil where we were, I planted feveral of them as a token to any one that might be cast away hereafter. This key, as we afterwards found, was one of the Bahama iflands, which conhift of a clufter of large iflands, with fmaller ones or keys, as they are called, interfperfed among them. It was about a mile in circumference, with a white fandy beach running in a regular order along it. On that part of it where we first attempted to land there stood some very large birds, called flamingoes: these, from the reflection of the fun, appeared to us at a little diftance as large as men; and, when they walked backwards and forwards, we could not conceive what they were: our captain swore they were cannibals. VOL. II. D This

This created a great panic among us; and we held a confultation how to act. The captain wanted to go to a key that was within fight, but a great way off; but I was against it, as in so doing we should not be able to fave all the people; 'And therefore,' faid I, · let us go on shore here, and perhaps • these cannibals may take to the water.' Accordingly we steered towards them; and when we approached them, to our very great joy and no lefs wonder, they walked off one after the other very deliberately; and at last they took flight and relieved us entirely from our fears. About the key there were turtles and feveral forts of fifh in fuch abundance that we caught them without bait, which was a great relief to us after the falt provisions on board. There was alfo a large rock on the beach, about ten feet high, which was in the form of a punch-bowl at the top; this we could

[51]

could not help thinking Providence had ordained to fupply us with rainwater; and it was fomething fingular that, if we did not take the water when it rained, in fome little time after it would turn as falt as fea-water.

Our first care, after refreshment, was to make ourfelves tents to lodge in, which we did as well as we could with some fails we had brought from the ship. We then began to think how we might get from this place, which was quite uninhabited; and we determined to repair our boat, which was very much shattered, and to put to sea in quest of a ship or some inhabited island. It took us up however eleven days before we could get the boat ready for sea in the manner we wanted it, with a fail and other necessaries. When we had got all things prepared the captain wanted me to flay on fhore while he went to sea in quest of a ves- D_2 fel fel to take all the people off the key; but this I refufed; and the captain and myfelf, with five more, fet off in the boat towards New Providence. We had no more than two mufket load of gun-powder with us if any thing fhould happen; and our flock of provisions confifted of three gallons of rum, four of water, fome falt beef, fome bifcuit; and in this manner we proceeded to fea.

[52]

On the second day of our voyage

we came to an ifland called Obbico, the largeft of the Bahama iflands. We were much in want of water; for by this time our water was expended, and we were exceedingly fatigued in pulling two days in the heat of the fun; and it being late in the evening, we hauled the boat afhore to try for water and remain during the night: when we came afhore we fearched for water, but could find none. When it it was dark, we made a fire around us for fear of the wild beafts, as the place was an entire thick wood, and we took it by turns to watch. In this fituation we found very little reft, and waited with impatience for the morning. As soon as the light appeared we set off again with our boat, in hopes of finding affiftance during the day. We were now much dejected and weakened by pulling the boat; for our fail was of no use, and we were almost familhed for want of fresh water to drink. We had nothing left to eat but falt beef, and that we could not use without water. In this fituation we toiled all day in fight of the island, which was very long; in the evening, seeing no relief, we made ashore again, and fastened our boat. We then went to look for fresh water, being quite faint for the want of it; and we dug and fearched about for some all the remainder of the even-D 3 ing, ing, but could not find one drop, fo that our dejection at this period became exceffive, and our terror fo great, that we expected nothing but death to deliver us. We could not touch our beef, which was as falt as brine, without fresh water; and we were in the greateft terror from the apprehension of wild beafts. When unwelcome night came we acted as on the night before; and the next morning we fet off again from the island in hopes of feeing fome veffel. In this manner we toiled as well as we were able till four o'clock, during which we passed feveral keys, but could not meet with a fhip; and, flill famifhing with thirft, went ashore on one of those keys again in hopes of finding fome water. Here we found fome leaves with a few drops of water in them, which we lapped with much eagernefs; we then dug in feveral places, but without fucces. As

53

[54]

[55]

As we were digging holes in fearch of water there came forth fome very thick and black fluff; but none of us could touch it, except the poor Dutch Creole, who drank above a quart of it as eagerly as if it had been wine. We tried to catch fish, but could not; and we now began to repine at our fate, and abandon ourfelves to despair; when, in the midit of our murmuring, the captain all at once cried out ' A fail! 'a fail! a fail!' This gladdening found was like a reprieve to a conviet, and we all inftantly turned to look at it; but in a little time fome of us began to be afraid it was not a fail. However, at a venture, we embarked and steered after it; and, in half an hour, to our unspeakable joy, we plainly faw that it was a vessel. At this our drooping spirits revived, and we made towards her with all the fpeed imaginable. When we came near to her, D_4 WC

[56]

we found the was a little floop, about the fize of a Gravesend hoy, and quite full of people; a circumstance which we could not make out the meaning of. Our captain, who was a Welchman, fwore that they were pirates, and would kill us. I faid, be that as it might, we must board her if we were to die for it; and, if they fhould not receive us kindly, we must oppose them as well as we could; for there was no alternative between their perishing and ours. This counsel was immediately taken; and I really believe that the captain, myfelf, and the Dutchman, would then have faced twenty men. We had two cutlaffes and a musquet, that I brought in the boat; and, in this fituation, we rowed alongfide, and immediately boarded her. I believe there were about forty hands on board; but how great was our surprise, as soon as we got on board, board, to find that the major part of them were in the fame predicament as ourfelves!

[57]

They belonged to a whaling fchooner that was wrecked two days before us about nine miles to the north of our veffel. When she was wrecked fome of them had taken to their boats and had left fome of their people and property on a key, in the fame manner as we had done; and were going, like us, to New Providence in quest of a ship, when they met with this little floop, called a wrecker; their employment in those seas being to look after wrecks. They were then going to take the remainder of the people belonging to the schooner; for which the wrecker was to have all things belonging to the vessel, and likewise their people's help to get what they could out of her, and were then to carry the crew to New Providence.

D 5 We

[58]

We told the people of the wrecker the condition of our veffel, and we made the fame agreement with them as the schooner's people; and, on their complying, we begged of them to go to our key directly, becaufe our people were in want of water. They agreed, therefore, to go along with us first; and in two days we arrived at the key, to the inexpreffible joy of the people that we had left behind, as they had been reduced to great extremities for want of water in our absence. Luckily for us, the wrecker had now more people on board than fhe could carry or victual for any moderate length of time; they therefore hired the schooner's people to work on our wreck, and we left them our boat, and embarked for New Providence.

Nothing could have been more fortunate than our meeting with this wrecker, for New Providence was at fuch fuch a distance that we never could have reached it in our boat. The ifland of Abbico was much longer than we expected; and it was not till after failing for three or four days that we got safe to the farther end of it, towards New Providence. When we arrived there we watered, and got a good many lobsters and other shellfish; which proved a great relief to us, as our provisions and water were almost exhausted. We then proceeded on our voyage; but the day after we left the island, late in the evening, and whilst we were yet amongst the Bahama keys, we were overtaken by a violent gale of wind, fo that we were obliged to cut away the maft. The vessel was very near foundering; for she parted from her anchors, and struck several times on the shoals. Here we expected every minute that she would have gone to pieces, and each moment to be our D 6 , laft;

[59]

[60]

last; fo much fo that my old captain and fickly useless mate, and feveral others, fainted; and death stared us in the face on every fide. All the fwearers on board now began to call on the God of Heaven to affift them : and, fure enough, beyond our comprehension he did assist us, and in a miraculous manner delivered us! In the very height of our extremity the wind lulled for a few minutes; and, although the fwell was high beyond expression, two men, who were expert fwimmers, attempted to go to the buoy of the anchor, which we still faw on the water, at some distance, in a little punt that belonged to the wrecker, which was not large enough to carry more than two. She filled different times in their endeavours to get into her alongfide of our veffel; and they faw nothing but death before them, as well as we; but they faid they might as well die that way 6

F 61 7 way as any other. A coil of very finall rope, with a little buoy, was put in along with them; and, at last, with great hazard, they got the punt clear from the vessel; and these two intrepid water heroes paddled away for life towards the buoy of the anchor. The eyes of us all were fixed on them all the time, expecting every minute to be their laft: and the prayers of all those that remained in their senses were offered up to God, on their behalf, for a fpeedy deliverance; and for our own, which depended on them; and he heard and answered us! These two men at laft reached the buoy; and, having fastened the punt to it, they tied one end of their rope to the finall buoy that they had in the punt, and fent it adrift towards the veffel. We on board observing this threw out boat-hooks and leads fastened to lines, in order to catch the buoy: at laft we caught it, and ç.

[62]

and fastened a hawfer to the end of the fmall rope; we then gave them a fign to pull, and they pulled the hawfer to them, and fastened it to the buoy: which being done we hauled for our lives; and, through the mercy of God, we got again from the shoals into deep water, and the punt got fafe to the veffel. It is impoffible for any to conceive our heart-felt joy at this fecond deliverance from ruin, but those who have suffered the fame hardfhips. Those whose ftrength and fenses were gone came to themfelves, and were now as elated as they were before depressed. Two days after this the wind ceased, and the water became fmooth. The punt then went on shore, and we cut down fome trees; and having found our maft and mended it we brought it on board, and fixed it up. As foon as we had done this we got up the anchor, and away we went once more for New Providence,

[63]

Providence, which in three days more we reached safe, after having been above three weeks in a fituation in which we did not expect to escape with life. The inhabitants here were very kind to us; and, when they learned our fituation, shewed us a great deal of hospitality and friendship. Soon after this every one of my old fellow-fufferers that were free parted from us, and shaped their course where their inclination led them. One merchant, who had a large floop, seeing our condition, and knowing we wanted to go to Georgia, told four of us that his veffel was going there; and, if we would work on board and load her, he would give us our passage free. As we could not get any wages whatever, and found it very hard to get off the place, we were obliged to consent to his propofal; and we went on board and helped to load the floop, though we

[64]

we had only our victuals allowed us. When the was entirely loaded he told us the was going to Jamaica firft, where we mult go if we went in her. This, however, I refuted; but my fellow-fufferers not having any money to help themfelves with, neceffity obliged them to accept of the offer, and to fieer that courfe, though they did not like it.

We flayed in New Providence about feventeen or eighteen days; during which time I met with many friends, who gave me encouragement to flay there with them: but I declined it; though, had not my heart been fixed on England, I fhould have flayed, as I liked the place extremely, and there were fome free black people here who were very happy, and we paffed our time pleafantly together, with the melodious found of the catguts, under the lime and lemon trees. At length Captain

[65]

Captain Phillips hired a floop to carry him and fome of the flaves that he could not fell to Georgia; and I agreed to go with him in this veffel, meaning now to take my farewell of that place. ' When the veffel was ready we all embarked; and I took my leave of New Providence, not without regret. We failed about four o'clock in the morning, with a fair wind, for Georgia; and about cleven o'clock the fame morning a fhort and fudden gale fprung up and blew away moft of our fails; and, as we were still amongst the keys, in a very few minutes it dashed the floop against the rocks. Luckily for us the water was deep; and the fea was not to angry but that, after having for fome time laboured hard, and being many in number, we were faved through God's mercy; and, by using our greatest exertions, we got the veisel off. The next day we returned to Providence, [66]!

Providence, where we foon got her again refitted. Some of the people fwore that we had spells set upon us by fomebody in Montferrat; and others that we had witches and wizzards amongst the poor helpless flaves; and that we never should arrive safe at Georgia. But these things did not deter me; I faid, 'Let us again face the ' winds and feas, and fwear not, but ' trust to God, and he will deliver us.' We therefore once more fet fail; and, with hard labour, in seven day's time arrived safe at Georgia. After our arrival we went up to the town of Savannah; and the fame evening I went to a friend's house to lodge, whose name was Mosa, a black man. We were very happy at meeting each other; and after fupper we had a light till it was between nine and ten o'clock at night. About that time the watch or patrol came by; and, discerning a light light in the house, they knocked at the door: we opened it; and they came in and fat down, and drank fome punch with us : they also begged some limes of me, as they understood I had fome, which I readily gave them. A little after this they told me I must go to the watch-house with them: this surprised me a good deal, after our kindness to them; and I afked them, Why fo? They faid that all negroes who had light in their houses after nine o'clock were to be taken into cuflody, and either pay fome dollars or be flogged. Some of those people knew that I was a free man; but, as the man of the house was not free, and had his mafter to protect him, they did not take the fame liberty with him they did with me. I told them that I was a free man, and just arrived from Providence; that we were not making any noise, and that I was not a stranger in that that place, but was very well known there : ' Befides,' faid I, ' what will you ' do with me?'--' That you shall fee,' replied they, ' but you must go to the "watch-houfe with us." Now whether they meant to get money from me or not I was at a lofs to know; but I thought immediately of the oranges and limes at Santa Cruz: and feeing that nothing would pacify them I went with them to the watch-houfe, where I remained during the night. Early the the next morning these imposing ruffians flogged a negro-man and woman that they had in the watch-house, and then they told me that I must be flogged too. I afked why? and if there was no law for free men? And told them if there was I would have it put in force against them. But this only exafperated them the more; and inftantly they fwore they would ferve me as Doctor Perkins had done; and they were

[67]

[68]

[69]

were going to lay violent han is on me; when one of them, more humane than the reft, faid that as I was a free man they could not justify stripping me by law. I then immediately fent for Doctor Brady, who was known to be an honeft and worthy man; and on his coming to my assistance they let me go. This was not the only difagreeable incident I met with while I was in this place; for, one day, while I was a little way out of the town of Savannah, I was befet by two white men, who meant to play their usual tricks with me in the way of kidnapping. As foon as these men accosted me, one of them said to the other, ' This is the very fellow 'we are looking for that you loft:' and the other fwore immediately that I was the identical person. On this they made up to me, and were about to handle me; but I told them to be ftill and keep off; for I had feen those kind

[70]

kind of tricks played upon other free blacks, and they muft not think to ferve me fo. At this they paufed a little, and one faid to the other-it will not do; and the other answered that I talked too good English. I-replied, I believed I did; and I had also with me a revengeful stick equal to the occasion; and my mind was likewife good. Happily however it was not used; and, after we had talked together a little in this manner, the rogues left me. I ftayed in Savannah some time, anxioufly trying to get to Montferrat once more to fee Mr. King, my old mafter, and then to take a final farewell of the American quarter of the globe. At laft I met with a floop called the Speedwell, Captain John Bunton, which belonged to Grenada, and was bound to Martinico, a French island, with a cargo of rice, and I shipped myself on board of her. Before I left Georgia a black black woman, who had a child lying dead, being very tenacious of the church burial fervice, and not able to get any white perfon to perform it, applied to me for that purpofe. I told her I was no parfon; and besides, that the service over the dead did not affect the foul. This however did not fatisfy her; she still urged me very hard: I therefore complied with her earnest entreaties, and at last confented to act the parson for the first time in my life. As she was much respected, there was a great company both of white and black people at the grave. I then accordingly affumed my new vocation, and performed the funeral ceremony to the fatisfaction of all present; after which I bade adieu to Georgia, and failed for Martinico.

[71]

[72]

CHAP. IX.

The author arrives at Martinico-Meets with new difficulties-Gets to Montferrat, where he takes leave of his old mafter, and fails for England-Meets Capt. Pascal—Learns the French horn— Hires himself with Dostor Irving, where he learns to freshen sea water-Leaves the dostor, and goes a voyage to Turkey and Portugal; and afterwards goes a voyage to Grenada, and another to Jamaica—Returns to the Doctor, and they embark together on a voyage to the North Pole, with the Hon. Capt. Phipps-Some account of that voyage, and the dangers the author was in-He returns to England.

I THUS took a final leave of Georgia; for the treatment I had received in it difgusted

[73]

difgusted me very much against the place; and when I left it and failed for Martinico I determined never more to revisit it. My new captain conducted his vessel fafer than my former one; and, after an agreeable voyage, we got fafe to our intended port. While I was on this island I went about a good deal, and found it very pleafant: in particular I admired the town of St. Pierre. which is the principal one in the ifland, and built more like an European town than any I had feen in the Weft Indies. In general alfo, flaves were better treated, had more holidays, and looked better than those in the English islands. After we had done our bufiness here, I wanted my discharge, which was necessary; for it was then the month of May, and I wished much to be at Montferrat to bid farewell to Mr. King, and all my other friends there, in time to fail for VOL. JI. E Old ٠,

[74]

Old England in the July fleet. But, alas! I had put a great flumbling block in my own way, by which I was near loing my pailage that feafon to England. I had lent my captain fome money, which I now wanted to enable me to profecute my intentions. This I told him; but when I applied for it, though I urged the necessity of my occafion, I met with fo much shuffling from him, that I began at last to be afraid of lofing my money, as I could not recover it by law: for I have already mentioned, that throughout the Weft Indies no black man's testimony is admitted, on any occasion, against any white perfon whatever, and therefore my own oath would have been of no ufe. I was obliged, therefore, to remain with him till he might be difposed to return it to me. Thus we failed from Martinico for the Grenades. I frequently prefiing the captain for my money to no purpofe; purpose; and, to render my condition worfe, when we got there, the captain and his owners quarrelled; fo that my fituation became daily more irkfome: for befides that we on board had little or no victuals allowed us, and I could not get my money nor wages, I could then have gotten my passage free to Montferrat had I been able to accept it. The worft of all was, that it was growing late in July, and the ships in the islands must fail by the 26th of that month. At last, however, with a great many entreaties, I got my money from the captain, and took the first vessel I could meet with for St. Eustatia. From thence I went in another to Baffeterre in St. Kitts, where I arrived on the 19th of July. On the 22d, having met with a veffel bound to Montferrat, I wanted to go in her; but the captain and others would not take me on board until I should advertife myfelf, and give notice of my going off the E 2

[75]

[76]

the island. I told them of my haste to be in Montferrat, and that the time then would not admit of advertifing, it being late in the evening, and the captain about to fail; but he infifted it was necessary, and otherwise he faid he would not take me. This reduced me to great perplexity; for if I should be compelled to fubmit to this degrading neceffity, which every black freeman is under, of advertifing himfelf like a flave, when he leaves an island, and which I thought a grofs imposition upon any freeman, I feared I should mis that opportunity of going to Montserrat, and then I could not get to England that year. The veffel was just going off, and no time could be loft; I immediately therefore fet about, with a heavy. heart, to try who I could get to befriend me in complying with the demands of the captain. Luckily I found, in a few minutes, some gentlemen of Montferrat

. [77]

ferrat whom 1 knew; and, having toke them my fituation, I requested their friendly affiftance in helping me off the island. Some of them, on this, went with me to the captain, and fatisfied him of my freedom; and, to my very great joy, he defired me to go on board. We then fet fail, and the next day, the 23d, I arrived at the wished-for place, after an absence of fix months, in which I had more than once experienced the delivering hand of Providence, when all human means of efcaping destruction seemed hopeles. I faw my friends with a gladnefs of heart which was increased by my absence and the dangers I had efcaped, and I was received with great friendship by them all, but particularly by Mr. King, to whom I related the fate of his floop, the Nancy, and the causes of her being wrecked. I now learned with extreme forrow, that his house was washed away E 3 during during my absence, by the buriling of a pond at the top of a mountain that was opposite the town of Plymouth. It fwept great part of the town away, and Mr. King loft a great deal of property from the inundation, and nearly his life. When I told him I intended to go to London that feason, and that I had come to visit him before my departure, the good man expressed a great deal of affection for me, and forrow that I should leave him, and warmly advised me to ftay there; infifting, as I was much respected by all the gentlemen in the place, that I might do very well, and in a short time have land and slaves of my own. I thanked him for this instance of his friendship; but, as I wifhed very much to be in London, I declined remaining any longer there, and begged he would excufe me. I then requested he would be kind enough to give me a certificate of my behaviour

[79]

our while in his fervice, which he very readily complied with, and gave me the following:

Montferrat, January 26, 1767.

- The bearer hereof, Guftavus Vassa, was my flave for upwards of three years, during which he has always behaved himfelf well, and discharged
 his duty with honesty and assiduity.
 ROBERT KING.
 - ' To all whom this may concern.'

Having obtained this, I parted from my kind mafter, after many fincere professions of gratitude and regard, and prepared for my departure for London. I immediately agreed to go with one Capt. John Hamer, for feven guineas, the passage to London, on board a ship called the Andromache; and on the 24th and 25th I had free dances, as they are called, with fome of my E 4 country-

[63]

countrymen, previous to my fetting off; after which I took leave of all my friend and on the 26th I embarked for London, exceedingly glad to fee my felf once more on board of a thip; and flill more fo, in fleering the courfe I had long wifned for. With a light heart I bade Montferrat farewell, and never had my feet on it fince; and with it I bade adjeu to the found of the cruel whip, and all other dreadful inftruments of torture; adieu to the offenfive fight of the violated chaftity of the fable females, which has too often accosted my eyes; adieu to oppressions (although to me lefs fevere than most of my countrymen); and adieu to the angry howling, dashing surfs. I wished for a. grateful and thankful heart to praise the Lord God on high for all his mercies! We had a most prosperous voyage, and, at the end of feven weeks, arrived at Cherry-Garden stairs. Thus were my

[81]

my longing eyes once more gratified with a fight of London, after having been absent from it above four years. I immediately received my wages, and I never had earned feven guineas fo quick in my life before; I had thirtyfeven guineas in all, when I got cleared of the ship. I now entered upon a scene, quite new to me, but full of hope. In this fituation my first thoughts were to look out for fome of my former friends, and amongst the first of those were the Miss Guerins. As foon, therefore, as I had regaled myself I went in queft of those kind ladies, whom I was very impatient to fee; and with fome difficulty and perfeverance, I found them at May's-hill, Greenwich. They were most agreeably furprised to see me, and I quite overjoyed at meeting with them. I told them my hiftory, at which they expressed great wonder, and freely acknowledged it did their coufin, E 5 Capt.

[8z]

Capt. Pascal, no honour. He then vitited there frequently; and I met him four or five days after in Greenwich park. When he faw me he appeared a good deal furprifed, and afked me how I came back? I anfwered, 'In a 'thip.' To which he replied dryly, 'I fuppofe you did not walk back to ' London on the water.' As I faw, by his manner, that he did not feem to be forry for his behaviour to me, and that I had not much reason to expect any favour from him, I told him that he had ufed me very ill, after I had been such a faithful fervant to him for fo many years; on which, without faying any more, he turned about and went away. A few days after this I met Capt. Pafcal at Mifs Guerin's houfe, and afked him for my prize-money. He faid there was none due to me; for, if my prize money had been 10,000l. he had a right to it all. I told him I was

[83]

was informed otherwife; on which he bade me defiance; and, in a bantering tone, defired me to commence a lawfuit against him for it : There are law-' yers enough,' faid he, ' that will take ' the caufe in hand, and you had better 'try it.' I told him then that I would try it, which enraged him very much; however, out of regard to the ladies, I remained still, and never made any farther demand of my right. Some time afterwards these friendly ladies asked me what I meant to do with myself, and how they could affift me. I thanked them, and faid, if they pleafed, I would be their fervant; but if not, as I had thirty-feven guineas, which would fupport me for fome time, I would be much obliged to them to recommend me to fome perfon who would teach me a bufinefs whereby I might earn my living. They answered me very politely, that they were forry it did not E 6 fuit

[84]

fuit them to take me as their fervant, and afked me what bufinefs I fhould like to learn? I faid, hair-dreffing. They then promifed to affift me in this; and foon after they recommended me to a gentleman whom I had known before, one Capt. O'Hara, who treated me with much kindnefs, and procured me a master, a hair-dresser, in Coventrycourt, Haymarket, with whom he placed me. I was with this man from September till the February following. In that time we had a neighbour in the fame court who taught the French horn. He ufed to blow it fo well that I was charmed with it, and agreed with him to teach me to blow it. Accordingly he took me in hand, and began to inftruct me, and I foon learned all the three parts. I took great delight in blowing on this inftrument, the evenings being long; and befides that I was fond of it, I did not like to be idle, and it filled filled up my vacant hours innocently. At this time alfo I agreed with the Rev. Mr. Gregory, who lived in the fame court, where he kept an academy and an evening-school, to improve me in arithmetic. This he did as far as barter and alligation; fo that all the time I was there I was entirely employed. In February 1768 I hired myfelf to Dr. Charles Irving, in Pallmall, fo celebrated for his fuccefsful experiments in making fea water fresh; and here I had plenty of hair-dreffing to improve my hand. This gentleman was an excellent mafter; he was exceedingly kind and good tempered; and allowed me in the evenings to attend my schools, which I effeemed a great bleffing; therefore I thanked God and him for it, and used all my diligence to improve the opportunity. This diligence and attention recommended me to the notice and care of my three preceptors,

[85]

[85]

ceptors, who on their parts bestowed a great deal of pains in my instruction, and befides were all very kind to me. My wages, however, which were by two thirds lefs than I ever had in my life (for I had only 121. per annum) I foon found would not be fufficient to defray this extraordinary expense of masters, and my own necessary expenses; my old thirty-seven guineas had by this time worn all away to one. I thought it best, therefore, to try the fea again in quest of more money, as I had been bred to it, and had hitherto found the profession of it successful. I had also a very great defire to see Turkey, and I now determined to gratify it. Accordingly, in the month of May, 1768, I told the doctor my with to go to fea again, to which he made no opposition; and we parted on friendly terms. The fame day I went into the city in quest of a master. I was extremely tremely fortunate in my inquiry; for I foon heard of a gentleman who had a ship going to Italy and Turkey, and he wanted a man who could drefs hair well. I was overjoyed at this, and went immediately on board of his ship, as I had been directed, which I found to be fitted up with great tafte, and I already foreboded no small pleasure in failing in her. Not finding the gentleman on board, I was directed to his lodgings, where I met with him the next day, and gave him a specimen of my dreffing. He liked it fo well that he hired me immediately, fo that I was perfectly happy; for the ship, master, and voyage, were entirely to my mind. The ship was called the Delawar, and my master's name was John Jolly, a neat fmart good humoured man, just fuch an one as I wished to ferve. We failed from England in July following, and our voyage was extremely pleafant. We

[87]

[88]

We went to Villa Franca, Nice, and. Leghorn; and in all these places I was charmed with the richnefs and beauty of the countries, and ftruck with the elegant buildings with which they abound. We had always in them plenty of extraordinary good wines and rich fruits, which I was very fond of; and I had frequent occasions of gratifying both my tafte and curiofity; for my captain always lodged on shore in those places, which afforded me opportunities to fee the country around. I alfo learned navigation of the mate, which I was very fond of. When we left Italy we had delightful failing among the Archipelago islands, and from thence to Smyrna in Turkey. This is a very ancient city; the houses are built of ftone, and most of them have graves adjoining to them; fo that they fometimes prefent the appearance of church-yards. Provisions are very plentiful

[89] plentiful in this city, and good wine less than a penny a pint. The grapes, pomegranates, and many other fruits, were also the richeft and largest I ever tafted. The natives are well looking and firong made, and treated me always with great civility. In general I believe they are fond of black people; and feveral of them gave me pressing invitations to stay amongst them, although they keep the franks, or Christians, separate, and do not suffer them to dwell immediately amongst them. I was aftonished in not feeing women in any of their fhops, and very rarely any in the ftreets; and whenever I did they were covered with a veil from head to foot, fo that I could not see their faces, except when any of them out of curiofity uncovered them to look at me, which they fometimes did. I was furprised to see how the Greeks are, in some measure, kept under der by the Turks, as the negroes are in the Weft Indies by the white people. The lefs refined Greeks, as I have already hinted, dance here in the fame manner as we do in my nation. On the whole, during our ftay here, which was about five months, I liked the place and the Turks extremely well. I could not help obferving one very remarkable circumftance there: the tails of the fheep are flat, and fo very large, that I have known the tail even of a lamb to weigh from eleven to thirteen pounds. The fat of them is very white and rich, and is excellent in puddings, for which it is much ufed. Our fhip being at length richly loaded with filk, and other articles, we failed for England.

[90]

In May 1769, foon after our return from Turkey, our ship made a delightful voyage to Oporto in Portugal, where we arrived at the time of the carnival. On our arrival, there were fent.

[91]

fent on board to us thirty-fix articles to observe, with very heavy penalties if we should break any of them; and none of us even dared to go on board any other veffel or on fhore till the Inquisition had sent on board and searched for every thing illegal, especially bibles. Such as were produced, and certain other things, were fent on shore till the ships were going away; and any perfon in whose custody a bible was found concealed was to be imprisoned and flogged, and fent into flavery for ten years. I faw here many very magnificent fights, particularly the garden of Eden, where many of the clergy and laity went in procession in their feveral orders with the hoft, and fung Te Deum. I had a great curiofity to go into some of their churches, but could not gain admittance without using the necessary sprinkling of holy water at my entrance. From curiofity, and a wifh to be holy, I therefore complied complied with this ceremony, but its virtues were loft on me, for I found myfelf nothing the better for it. This place abounds with plenty of all kinds of provisions. The town is well built and pretty, and commands a fine pro. fpect. Our ship having taken in a load of wine, and other commodities, we failed for London, and arrived in July following. Our next voyage was to the Mediterranean. The ship was again got ready, and we failed in September for Genoa. This is one of the fineft cities I ever faw; fome of the edifices were of beautiful marble, and made a most noble appearance; and many had very curious fountains before them. The churches were rich and magnificent, and curioufly adorned both in the infide and But all this grandeur was in my out. eyes difgraced by the galley flaves, whole condition both there and in other parts of Italy is truly piteous and wretched.

[92]

[93]

rd. After we had stayed there some weeks, during which we bought many different things which we wanted, and got them very cheap, we failed to Naples, a charming city, and remarkably clean. The bay is the most beautiful I ever faw; the moles for shiping are excellent. I thought it extraordinary to fee grand operas acted here on Sunday nights, and even attended by their majeftics. too, like these great ones, went to those fights, and vainly ferved God in the day while I thus ferved mammon effectually at night. While we remained here there happened an eruption of mount Vefuvius, of which I had a perfect view. It was extremely awful; and we were fo near that the ashes from it used to be thick on our deck. After we had tranfacted our business at Naples we failed with a fair wind once more for Smyrna, where we arrived in December. A ferafkier

, [94]

raskier or officer took a liking to me here, and wanted me to flay, and offered me two wives; however I refused the temptation. The merchants here travel in caravans or large companies. I have feen many caravans from India, with some hundreds of camels, laden. with different goods. The people of these caravans are quite brown. Among other articles, they brought with them a great quantity of locusts, which are a kind of pulse, sweet and pleasant to the palate, and in fhape refembling French beans, but longer. Each kind of goods is fold in a fircet by itfelf, and I always found the Turks very honeft in their dealings. They let no Chriftians into their mosques or churches, for which I was very forry; as I was always fond of going to fee the different modes of worship of the people whereever I went. The plague broke out while we were in Smyrna, and we ftopped ftopped taking goods into the ship till it was over. She was then richly laden, and we failed in about March 1770 for England. One day in our passige we met with an accident which was near burning the ship. A black cook, in melting some fat, overset the pan into the fire under the deck, which immediately began to blaze, and the flame went up very high under the foretop. With the fright the poor cook became almost white, and altogether speechlefs. Happily however we got the fire out without doing much milchief. After various delays in this passage, which was tedious, we arrived in Standgate creek in July; and, at the latter end of the year, fome new event occurred, fo that my noble captain, the ship, and I all separated.

[95]

In April 1771 I shipped myself as a steward with Capt. Wm. Robertson of the ship Grenada Planter, once more to try

[96]

try my fortune in the Weft Indics; and we failed from London for Madeira, Barbadoes, and the Grenades. When we were at this last place, having fome goods to fell, I met one emore with my former kind of West India customers. A white man, an islander, bought fome goods of me to the amount of fome pounds, and made me many fair promises as usual, but without any intention of paying me. He had likewife bought goods from some more of our people, whom he intended to ferve in the same manner; but he still amused us with promises. However, when our ship was loaded, and near failing, this honest buyer discovered no intention or fign of paying for any thing hehad bought of us; but on the contrary, when I asked him for my money he threatened me and another black man he had bought goods of, fo that we found we were like to get more blows than than payment. On this we went to complain to one Mr. M'Intosh, a juftice of the peace; we told his worfhip of the man's villainous tricks, and begged that he would be kind enough to see us redressed : but being negrocs, although free, we could not get any remedy; and our thip being then just upon the point of failing, we knew not how to help ourfelves, though we thought it hard to lofe our property in this manner. Luckily for us however, this man was also indebted to three white failors, who could not get a farthing from him; they therefore readily joined us, and we all went together in fearch of him. When we found where he was, I took him out of a houle and threatened him with vengeance; on which, finding he was likely to be handled roughly, the rogue offered each of us fome fmall allowance, but nothing near our demands. This ex-VOL. II. F afperated

[97]

[98]

asperated us much more; and some were for cutting his ears off; but he begged hard for mercy, which was at last granted him, after we had entirely stripped him. We then let him go, for which he thanked us, glad to get off fo eafily, and ran into the bushes, after having wished us a good voyage. We then repaired on board, and shortly after set fail for England. I cannot help remarking here a very narrow escape we had from being blown up, owing to a piece of negligence of mine. Just as our ship was under sail, I went down into the cabin to do fome bufiness, and had a lighted candle in my hand, which, in my hurry, without thinking, I held in a barrel of gunpowder. It remained in the powder until it was near catching fire, when fortunately I observed it and snatched it out in time, and providentially no harm happened; but I was fo overcome come with terror that I immediately fainted at this deliverance.

[99]

In twenty-eight days time we arrived in England, and I got clear of this ship. But, being still of a roving difposition, and desirous of seeing as many different parts of the world as I could, I shipped myself soon after, in the same year, as steward on board of a fine large ship, called the Jamaica, Captain David Watt; and we failed from England in December 1771 for Nevis and Jamaica. I found Jamaica to be a very fine large island, well peopled, and the most considerable of the West India islands. There was a vaft number of negroes here, whom I found as usual exceedingly imposed upon by the white people, and the flaves punished as in the other islands. There are negroes whose business it is to flog flaves; they go about to different people for employment, and the ufual pay is from one to F 2 four four bits. I faw many cruel punishments inflicted on the flaves in the flort time I flayed here. In particular I was prefent when a poor fellow was ticd up and kept hanging by the wrifts at fome diftance from the ground, and then some half hundred weights were fixed to his ancles, in which posture he was flogged moft unmercifully. There were also, as I heard, two different mafters noted for cruelty on the island, who had staked up two negroes naked, and in two hours the vermin flung them to death. I heard a gentleman I well knew tell my captain that he paffed fentence on a negro man to be burnt alive for attempting to poilon an overleer. I pass over numerous other instances, in order to relieve the reader by a milder scene of roguery. Before I had been long on the ifland, one Mr. Smith at Port Morant bought goods of me to the amount of twenty-five pounds fterling; ling; but when I demanded payment from him, he was going each time to beat me, and threatened that he would put me in goal. One time he would fay I was going to fet his house on fire, at another he would fwear I was going to run away with his flaves. I was altonished at this usage from a perfon who was in the fituation of a gentleman, but I had no alternative; I was therefore obliged to fubmit. When I came to Kinglton, I was surprised to see the number of Africans who were assembled together on Sundays; particularly at a large commodious place, called Spring Path. Here each different nation of Africa meet and dance after the manner of their own country. They still retain most of their native customs: they bury their dead, and put victuals, pipes and tobacco, and other things, in the grave with the corps, in the fame manner as in Africa. F_3 Our

T 100]

[101]

[102]

Our ship having got her loading we failed for London, where we arrived in the August following. On my return to London, I waited on my old and good mafter, Dr. Irving, who made me an offer of his fervice again. Being now tired of the fea I gladly accepted it. I was very happy in living with this gentleman once more; during which time we were daily employed in reducing old Neptune's dominions by purifying the briny element and making it fresh. Thus I went on till May 1773, when I was roufed by the found of fame, to seek new adventures, and to find, towards the north pole, what our Creator never intended we should, a passage to India. An expedition was now fitting out to explore a north-east passage, conducted by the Honourable John Constantine Phipps, fince Lord Mulgrave, in his Majesty's floop of war the Race Horse. My [103]

My mafter being anxious for the reputation of this adventure, we therefore prepared every thing for our voyage, and I attended him on board the Race Horfe, the 24th day of May 1773. We proceeded to Sheernefs, where we were joined by his Majefty's floop the Carcafs, commanded by Captain Lutwidge. On the 4th of June we failed towards our destined place, the pole; and on the 15th of the fame month we were off Shetland. On this day I had a great and unexpected deliverance from an accident which was near blowing up the ship and destroying the crew, which made me ever after during the voyage uncommonly. cautious. The ship was so filled that there was very little room on board for any one, which placed me in a very aukward fituation. I had refolved to keep a journal of this fingular and interefting voyage; and I had no other F 4 place place for this purpose but a little cabin, or the doctor's store-room, where I flept. This little place was ftuffed with all manner of combustibles, particularly with tow and aquafortis, and many other dangerous things. Unfortunately it happened in the evening as I was writing my journal, that I had occasion to take the candle out of the lanthorn, and a spark having touched a fingle thread of the tow, all the reft caught the flame, and immediately the whole was in a blaze. I faw nothing but present death before me, and expected to be the first to perish in the flames. In a moment the alarm was fpread, and many people who were near ran to affift in putting out the . fire. All this time I was in the very midft of the flames; my fhirt, and the handkerchief on my neck, were burnt, « and I was almost finothered with the smoke. However, through God's mercy, mercy, as I was nearly giving up all hopes, some people brought blankets and mattreffes and threw them on the flames, by which means in a short time the fire was put out. I was feverely reprimanded and menaced by fuch of the officers who knew it, and flrictly charged never more to go there with a light : and, indeed, even my own fears made me give heed to this command for a little time; but at last, not being able to write my journal in any other part of the ship, I was tempted again to venture by stealth with a light in the fame cabin, though not wirhout confiderable fear and dread on my mind. On the 20th of June we began to use Dr. Irving's apparatus for making falt water fresh; I used to attend the distillery: I frequently purified from twenty-fix to forty gallons a day. The water thus distilled was perfectly pure, well tafted, and free from falt; F_5 and

[104]

2

[105]

[106]

and was used on various occasions on board the ship. On the 28th of June, being in lat. 78, we made Greenland, where I was furprifed to fee the fun did not set. The weather now became extremely cold; and as we failed between north and east, which was our courfe, we faw many very high and curious mountains of ice; and also a great number of very large whales, which used to come close to our ship, and blow the water up to a very great height in the air. One morning we had vast quantities of sca-horses about the ship, which neighed exactly like any other horses. We fired some harpoon guns amongst them, in order to take some, but we could not get any. The 30th, the captain of a Greenland fhip came on board, and told us of three ships that were lost in the ice; however we still held on our course till July the 11th, when we were ftopt by one one compact impenetrable body of ice. We ran along it from east to west above ten degrees; and on the 27th we got as far north as 80, 37; and in 19 or 20 degrees east longitude from London. On the 29th and 30th of July we saw one continued plain of finooth unbroken ice, bounded only by the horizon; and we fastened to a piece of ice that was eight yards eleven inches thick. We had generally funshine, and constant daylight; which gave cheerfulnefs and novelty to the whole of this striking, grand, and uncommon scene; and, to heighten it still more, the reflection of the fun from the ice gave the clouds a most beautiful appearance. We killed many different animals at this time, and among the reft nine bears. Though they had nothing in their paunches but water yet they were all very fat. We used to decoy them to the ship sometimes by F 6 burning burning feathers or fkins. I thought them coarfe eating, but fome of the fhip's company relified them very much. Some of our people once, in the boat, fired at and wounded a feahorfe, which dived immediately; and, in a little time after, brought up with it a number of others. They all joined in an attack upon the boat, and were with difficulty prevented from flaving or oversetting her; but a boat from the Carcafs having come to affift ours, and joined it, they difperfed, after having wrefted an oar from one of the men. One of the ship's boats had before been attacked in the fame manner, but happily no harm was done. Though we wounded feveral of these animals we never got but one. We remained hereabouts until the 1st of August; when the two thips got completely fastered in the ice, occasioned by the loofe ice that fet in from the fea. This made made our fituation very dreadful and alarming; fo that on the 7th day wo were in very great apprehension of having the ships squeezed to pieces. The officers now held a council to know what was best for us to do in order to fave our lives; and it was de-. termined that we should endeavour to escape by dragging our boats along the ice towards the fea; which, however, was farther off than any of us thought. This determination filled us with extreme dejection, and confounded us with despair; for we had very little prospect of escaping with life. However, we fawed fome of the ice about the flips to keep it from hurting them; and thus kept them in a kind of pond. We then began to drag the boats as well as we could towards the sea; but, after two or three days labour, we made very little progress; so that some of our hearts totally tally failed us, and I really began to give up myself for lost, when I faw our furrounding calamities. While we were at this hard labour I once fell into a pond we had made amongft fome loofe ice, and was very near being drowned; but providentially fome people were near who gave me immediate affiftance, and thereby I escaped drowning. Our deplorable condition, which kept up the conftant apprehension of our perishing in the ice, brought me gradually to think of eternity in fuch a manner as I never had done before. I had the fears of death hourly upon me, and fhuddered at the thoughts of meeting the grim king of terrors in the natural state I then was in, and was exceedingly doubtful of a happy eternity if I should die in it. I had no hopes of my life being prolonged for any time; for we faw that our existence could not be long on the ice after leaving

[107]

[108]

[109]

[110]

[III]

ing the ships, which were now out of fight, and fome miles from the boats. Our appearance now became truly lamentable; pale dejection seized every countenance; many, who had been before blasphemers, in this our distres began to call on the good God of heaven for his help; and in the time of our utter need he heard us, and against hope or human probability delivered us! It was the eleventh day of the ships being thus fastened, and the fourth of our drawing the boats in this manner, that the wind changed to the E. N. E. The weather immediately became mild, and the ice broke towards the sea, which was to the S.W. of us. Many of us on this got on board again, and with all our might we hove the ships into every open water we could find, and made all the fail on them in our power; and now, having a prospect of success, we made fignals fignals for the boats and the remainder of the people. This feemed to us like a reprieve from death; and happy was the man who could first get on board of any fhip, or the first boat he could meet. We then proceeded in this manner till we got into the open water again, which we accomplifhed in about thirty hours, to our infinite joy and gladness of heart. As soon as we were out of danger we came to anchor and, refitted; and on the 19th of August' we failed from this uninhabited extremity of the world, where the inhofpitable climate affords neither food nor fhelter, and not a tree or fhrub of any kind grows amongst its barren rocks; but all is one defolate and expanded waste of ice, which even the conflant beams of the fun for fix months in the year cannot penetrate or diffolve. The fun now being on the decline the days shortened as we we failed to the fouthward; and, on the 28th, in latitude 73, it was dark by ten o'clock at night. September the 10th, in latitude 58-59, we met a very fevere gale of wind and high feas, and fhipped a great deal of water in the space of ten hours. This made us work exceedingly hard at all our pumps a whole day; and one fea, which flruck the ship with more force than any thing I ever met with of the kind before, laid her under water for some time, fo that we thought fhe would have gone down. Two boats were washed from the booms, and the long-boat from the chucks: all other moveable things on the deck were also washed away, among which were many curious things of different kinds which we had brought from Greenland; and we were obliged, in order to lighten the ship, to toss some of our guns overboard. We faw a ship, at the same time, time, in very great distress, and her masts were gone; but we were unable to affift her. We now loft fight of the Carcals till the 26th, when we faw land about Orfordness, off which place fhe joined us. From thence we failed for London, and on the 30th came up to Deptford. And thus ended our Arctic voyage, to the no fmall joy of all on board, after having been absent four months; in which time, at the imminent hazard of our lives, we explored nearly as far towards the Pole as 81 degrees north, and 20 degrees east longitude; being much farther, by all accounts, than any navigator had ever ventured before; in which we fully proved the impracticability of finding apassage that way to India.

[[[]]

[113]

[114]

СНАР.

[- 115]

CHAP. X.

The author leaves Doftor Irving and engages on board a Turkey ship—Account of a black man's being kidnapped on board and sent to the West Indies, and the author's fruitles endeavours to procure his freedom—Some account of the manner of the author's conversion to the faith of Jesus Christ.

OUR voyage to the North Pole being ended, I returned to London with Doctor Irving, with whom I continued for fome time, during which I began ferioufly to reflect on the dangers I had efcaped, particularly those of my last voyage, which made a lasting impression on my mind, and, by the grace of God, proved afterwards a mercy to me; it caused caufed me to reflect deeply on my eternal flate, and to feek the Lord with full purpole of heart ere it was too late. I rejoiced greatly; and heartily thanked the Lord for directing me to London, where I was determined to work out my own falvation, and in fo doing procure a title to heaven; not knowing, agreeable to the word of truth, that it is God who worketh in us both to will and to do.

[116]

In process of time I left my master, Doctor Irving, the purifier of waters. I lodged in Coventry-court, Haymarket, where I was continually oppressed and much concerned about the falvation of my foul, and was determined (in my own strength) to be a first-rate Christian. I used every means for this purpose; and, not being able to find any perfon amongst those with whom I was then acquainted that acquiesced with me in point of religion, or, or, in scripture language, that would thew me any good, I was much dejected, and knew not where to feek relief; however, I first frequented the neighbouring churches, St. James's, and others, two or three times a day, for many weeks: still I came away distatisfied; fomething was wanting that I could not get at, and I really found more heartfelt relief in reading my bible at home than in attending the church; and, being resolved to be faved, I pursued other methods. First I went among the quakers, where the word of God was neither read or preached, fo that I remained as much in the dark as ever. I then fearched into the Roman catholic principles, but was not in the least edified. I at length had recourse to the Jews, and that availed me nothing, as the fear of eternity daily harafied my mind, and I knew not where to feek thelter from the wrath to come. However

[117]

[118]

ever this was my conclusion, at all events, to read the four evangelists, and whatever fect or party I found adhering thereto fuch I would join. Thus I went on heavily without any guide to direct me the way that leadeth to eternal life. I asked different people questions about the manner of going to heaven, and was told different ways. Here I was much ftaggered, and could not find any at that time more righteous than myfelf, or indeed fo much inclined to devotion. I thought we should not all be faved (this is agreeable to the holy fcriptures), nor would all be damned. I found none among the circle of my acquaintance that kept wholly the ten commandments. So righteous was I in my own eyes, that I was convinced I excelled many of them in that point, by keeping eight out of ten; and finding those who in general termed themfelves Christians net so honest or so good in their morals as the

[119]

the Turks, I really thought the Turks were in a fafer way of falvation than my neighbours: fo that between hopes and fears I went on, and the chief comforts I enjoyed were in the mufical French horn, which I then practifed, and also dreffing of hair. Such was my fituation some months, experiencing the difhonesty of many people here. I determined at last to set out for Turkey, and there to end my days. It was now early in the fpring 1774. I fought for a master, and found a captain John Hughes, commander of a ship called Anglicania, fitting out in the river Thames, and bound to Smyrna in Turkey. I shipped myself with him as a steward; at the fame time I recommended to him a very clever black man, John Annis, as a cook. This man was on board the ship near two months doing his duty: he had formerly lived many years with Mr. William Kirkpatrick, a gentleman of

[120]

of the illand of St. Kitts, from whom he parted by consent, though he afterwards tried many fchemes to inveigle' the poor man. He had applied to many captains who traded to St. Kitts to trepan him; and when all their attempts and schemes of kidnapping proved abortive, Mr. Kirkpatrick came to our ship at Union Stairs on Easter Monday, April the fourth, with two wherry boats and fix men, having learned that the man was on board; and tied, and forcibly took him away from the ship, in the prefence of the crew and the chief mate, who had detained him after he had information to come away. I believe this was a combined piece of bufiness: but, be that as it may, it certainly reflected great difgrace on the mate and captain alfo, who, although they had defired the oppressed man to ftay on board, yet this vile act on the nian who had ferved him, he did not in

[]21]

in the least assist to recover him, or pay me a farthing of his wages, which was about five pounds. I proved the only friend he had, who attempted to regain him his liberty if possible, having known the want of liberty myfelf. I fent as foon as I could to Gravesend, and got knowledge of the ship in which he was; but unluckily the had failed the first tide after he was put on board. My intention was then immediately to apprehend Mr. Kirkpatrick, who was about fetting off for Scotland; and, having obtained a kabeas corpus for him, and got a tipstast to go with me to St. Paul's church-yard, where he lived, he, fuspecting fomething of this kind, fet a watch to look out. My being known to them occafioned me to use the following deception: I whitened my face, that they might not know me, and this had its defired effect. He did not go out of · his house that night, and next morning VOL. II. G l con-

[122]

I contrived a well plotted stratagem notwithstanding he had a gentleman in his house to perfonate him. My direction to the tipstaff, who got admittance into the house, was to conduct him to a judge, according to the writ. When he came there, his plea was, that he had not the body in cuftody, on which he was admitted to bail. I proceeded immediately to that philanthropift, Granville Sharp, Efq. who received me with the utmost kindness, and gave me every instruction that was needful on the occafion. I left him in full hope that I should gain the unhappy man his liberty, with the warmest fense of gratitude towards Mr. Sharp for his kindnefs; but, alas! my attorney proved unfaithful; he took my money, loft me many months employ, and did not do the least good in the cause: and when the poor man arrived at St. Kitts, he was, according to cuftom, staked to the 6

[123]

the ground with four pins through a cord, two on his wrifts, and two on his ancles, was cut and flogged most unmercifully, and afterwards loaded cruelly with irons about his neck. I had two very moving letters from him, while he was in this fituation; and also was told of it by fome very respectable families now in London, who faw him in St. Kitts, in the fame ftate in which he remained till kind death releafed him out of the hands of his tyrants. During this difagreeable bufinefs I was under ftrong convictions of fin, and thought that my flate was worfe than any man's; my mind was unaccountably disturbed; I often wished for death, though at the fame time convinced I was altogether unprepared for that awful fummons. Suffering much by villains in the late caufe, and being much concerned about the flate of my foul, these things (but particularly the latter) G 2 brought brought me very low; fo that I became a burden to myfelf, and viewed all things around me as emptiness and vanity, which could give no fatisfaction to a troubled conscience. I was again determined to go to Turkey, and refolyed, at that time, never more to return to England. I engaged as steward on board a Turkeyman (the Wefter Hall, Capt. Linna); but was prevented by means of my late captain, Mr. Hughes, and others. All this appeared to be against me, and the only comfort I then experienced was, in reading the holy fcriptures, where I faw that ' there 'is no new thing under the fun,' Ecclef. i. 9; and what was appointed for me I muit fubmit to. Thus I continued to travel in much heavinefs, and frequently murmured against the Almighty, particularly in his providential dealings; and, awful to think! I began to blaspheme, and wished often to be

Ð

[124]

[125]

be any thing but a human being. In these severe conflicts the Lord answered me by awful ' visions of the night, ' when deep fleep falleth upon men, in · flumberings upon the bed,' Job xxxiii. 15. He was pleafed, in much mercy, to give me to fee, and in fome meafure to understand, the great and awful fcene of the judgment-day, that 'no ' unclean perfon, no unholy thing, can enter into the kingdom of God,' Eph. v. 5. I would then, if it had been possible, have changed my nature with the meaneft worm on the earth; and was ready to fay to the mountains and rocks fall on me,' Rev. vi. 16; but all in vain. I then requested the divine Creator that he would grant me a fmall fpace of time to repent of my follies and vile iniquities, which I felt were grievous. The Lord, in his manifold mercies, was pleafed to grant my request, and being G 3. yet yet in a state of time, the sense of God's mercies was fo great on my mind when I awoke, that my strength entirely failed me for many minutes, and I was exceedingly weak, This was the first spiritual mercy I ever was fenfible of, and being on praying ground, as foon as I recovered a little firength, and got out of bed and dreffed myfelf, I invoked Heaven from my inmost foul, and fervently begged that God would never again permit me to blaspheme his most holy name. The Lord, who is long-fuffering, and full of compation to fuch poor rebels as we are, condefcended to hear and answer. I felt that I was altogether unholy, and faw clearly what a bad use I had made of the faculties I was endowed with; they were given me to glorify God with; I thought, therefore, I had better want them here, . and enter into life eternal, than abuse them

۳ ٦

[127]

them and be caft into hell fire. I prayed to be directed, if there were any holier than those with whom I was acquainted, that the Lord would point them out to me. I appealed to the Searcher of hearts, whether I did not with to love him more, and ferve him better. Notwithstanding all this, the reader may eafily difcern, if he is a believer, that I was still in nature's darkness. At length I hated the house in which I lodged, because God's most holy name was blasphemed in it; then I faw the word of God verified, viz. ' Before they call, I will an- fwer; and while they are yet fpeaking, ' I will hear.'

I had a great defire to read the bible the whole day at home; but not having a convenient place for retirement, I left the houfe in the day, rather than ftay amongst the wicked ones; and that day as I was walking, it pleafed God to G_4 direct direct me to a house where there was an cld fea-faring man, who experienced much of the love of God shed abroad in his heart. He began to discourse with me; and, as I defired to love the Land, his conversation rejuiced me greatly; and indeed I had never heard before the love of Chrift to believers fet forth in fuch a manner, and in fo clear a point of view. Here I had more questions to put to the man than his time would permit him to answer; and in that memorable hour there came in a diffenting minister; he joined our discourse, and asked me fome few questions; among others, where I heard the gospel preached. I knew not what he meant by hearing the gospel; I told him I had read the gofpel: and he asked where I. went to church, or whether I went at all or not. To which I replied, 'I ' attended St. James's, St. Martin's, and " St. Ann's, Soho;'- So,' faid he, ' you 'are '

[128]

[129]

are a churchman.' I answered, I was. He then invited me to a lovefeast at his chapel that evening. I accepted the offer, and thanked him; and foon after he went away, I had fome further difcourfe with the old Chriftian, added to some profitable reading, which made me exceedingly happy. When I left him he reminded me of coming to the feaft; I affured him I would be there. Thus we parted, and I weighed over the heavenly converfation that had passed between these two men, which cheered my then heavy and drooping fpirit more than any thing I had met with for many months. However, I thought the time long in going to my fuppofed banquet. I also wished much for the company of these friendly men; their company pleafed me much; and I thought the gentlemen very kind, in asking me, a stranger, to a feast; but how fingular did it appear to me, to G5 have have it in a chapel! When the wishedfor hour came I went, and happily the old man was there, who kindly feated me, as he belonged to the place. I was much aftonished to see the place filled with people, and no figns of eating and drinking. There were many ministers in the company. At laft they began by giving out hymns, and between the finging the minister engaged in prayer; in fhort, I knew not what to make of this fight, having never feen any thing of the kind in my life before now. Some of the guests began to speak their experience, agreeable to what I read in the Scriptures; much was faid by every speaker of the providence of God, and his unfpeakable mercies, to each of them. This I knew in a great measure, and could most heartily join them. But when they fpoke of a future . flate, they feemed to be altogether certain of their calling and election of God; and [131]

7

[130]

and that no one could ever separate them from the love of Chrift, or pluck them out of his hands. This filled me with utter consternation, intermingled with admiration. I was fo amazed as not to know what to think of the company; my heart was attracted and my affections were enlarged. I wished to be as happy as them, and was perfuaded in my mind that they were different from the world 'that lieth in wickedness,' I John v. 19. Their language and finging, &c. did well harmonize; I was entirely overcome, and wished to live and die thus. Laftly, fome perfons in the place produced some neat baskets full of buns, which they diffributed about; and each perfoncommunicated with his neighbour, and fipped water out of different mugs, which they handed about to all who were present. This kind of Christian fellowship I had never seen, nor ever thought of feeing on earth; it fully reminded me GG of

۵

[132]

of what I had read in the holy fcriptures, of the primitive Christians, who loved each other and broke bread. In partaking of it, even from house to house, this entertainment (which lasted about four hours) ended in finging and prayer. It was the first foul feast I ever was present at. This last twenty-four hours produced me things, fpiritual and temporal, fleeping and waking, judgment and mercy, that I could not but admire the goodness of God, in directing the blind, blafphemous finner in the path that he knew not of, even among the just; and instead of judgment he has shewed mercy, and will hear and answer the prayers and fupplications of every returning prodigal:

> O! to grace how great a debtor Daily I'm conftrain'd to be !

Afer this I was refolved to win Heaven if possible; and if I perished I thought thought it should be at the feet of Jefus, in praying to him for falvation. Afterhaving been an eye-witness to some of the happiness which attended those who feared God, I knew not how, with any propriety, to return to my lodgings, where the name of God was continually profaned, at which I felt the greatest horror. I paufed in my mind for fome time, not knowing what to do; whether to hire a bed elfewhere, or go home again. At last, fearing an evil report might arise, I went home, with a farewell to card-playing and vain jefting, &c. I faw that time was very thort, eternity long, and very near, and I viewed those perfons alone bleffed who were found ready at midnight call, or when the Judge of all, both quick and dead, cometh.

[133]

The next day I took courage, and went to Holborn, to fee my new and worthy acquaintance, the old man, Mr.

[134]

Mr. C---; he, with his wife, a gracious woman, were at work at filk weaving; they feemed mutually happy, and both quite glad to fee me, and I more fo to fee them. I fat down, and we conversed much about soul matters, &c. Their discourse was amazingly delightful, edifying, and pleafant. I knew, not at last how to leave this agreeable pair, till time summoned me away. As I was going they lent me a little book, entitled " The Conversion of an In-"dian." It was in questions and anfwers. The poor man came over the fea to London, to inquire after the Christian's God, who, (through rich mercy) he found, and had not his journey in vain. The above book was of great use to me, and at that time was a means of strengthening my faith; however, in parting, they both invited me to call on them when I pleafed. This delighted me, and I took care to make all

[135]

all the improvement from it I could;
and fo far I thanked God for fuch company and defires. I prayed that the many evils I felt within might be done away, and that I might be weaned from my former carnal acquaintances. This was quickly heard and anfwered, and I * was foon connected with those whom the foripture calls the excellent of the earth. I heard the gospel preached, and the thoughts of my heart and actions were laid open by the preachers, and the way of falvation by Chrift alone was evidently fet forth. Thus I went on happily for near two months; and I once heard, during this period, a reverend gentleman fpeak of a man who had departed this life in full affurance of his going to glory. I was much aftonithed at the affertion; and did very deliberately inquire how he could get at this knowledge. I was anfwered fully, agreeable to what I read in the oracles oracles of truth; and was told alfo, that if I did not experience the new birth, and the pardon of my fins, through the bloed of Chrift, before I died, I could not enter the kingdom of heaven. I knew not what to think of this report, as I thought I kept eight commandments out of ten; then my worthy interpreter told me I did not do it, nor could I; and he added, that no man ever did or could keep the commandments, without offending in one point. I thought this founded very strange, and puzzled me much for many weeks; for I thought it a hard faying. I then afked my friend, Mr. L----d, who was a clerk in a chapel, why the commandments of God were given, if we could not be faved by them? To which he replied, · The law is a fchoolmafter to bring us ' to Chrift,' who alone could and did keep the commandments, and fulfilled all their requirements for his elect people, ~people, even those to whom he had given a living faith, and the fins of those chofen veffels zvere already atoned for and forgiven them whilft living; and if I did not experience the fame before my exit, the Lord would fay at that great day to me 'Go ye curfed,' &c. &c. for God would appear faithful in his judgments to the wicked, as he would be faithful in thewing mercy to those who were ordained to it before the world was; therefore Chrift Jefus feemed to be all in all to that man's foul. I was much wounded at this difcourfe, and brought into fuch a dilemma as I never expected. Iasked him, if he was to die that moment, whether he was fure to enter the kingdom of God? and added, 'Do you know that your fins are forgiven ' you?' He answered in the affirmative. Then confusion, anger, and discontent feized me, and I staggered much at this fort of doctrine; it brought me to a fland, ftand, not knowing which to believe, whether falvation by works or by faith only in Christ. I requested him to tell me how I might know when my fins were forgiven me. He assured me he could not, and that none but God alone could do this. I told him it was very mysterious; but he faid it was really matter of fact, and quoted many portions of fcripture immediately to the point, to which I could make no reply. He then defired me to pray to God to shew me these things. I answered, that I prayed to God every day? He faid, 'I perceive you are a church-'man.' I anfwered I was. He then entreated me to beg of God to shew me what I was, and the true flate of my foul. I thought the prayer very short and odd; fo we parted for that time. I weighed all these things well over, and could not help thinking how it was possible for a man to know that his fins were · were forgiven him in this life. I wished that God would reveal this felf fame thing unto me. In a short time after this I went to Westminster chapel; the Rev. Mr. P-- preached, from Lam. iii. 39. It was a wonderful fermon; he clearly shewed that a living man had no cause to complain for the punishment of his fins; he evidently juffified the Lord in all his dealings with the fons of men; he also shewed the juffice of God in the eternal punishment of the wicked and impenitent. the difcourfe feemed to me like a twoedged fword cutting all ways; it afforded me much joy, intermingled with many fears, about my foul; and when it was ended, he gave it out that he intended, the enfuing week, to examine all those who meant to attend the Lord's table. Now I thought much of my good works, and at the fame time was doubtful of my being a proper object to

[136]

[137]

[138]

[139]

[140]

to receive the facrament; I was full of meditation till the day of examining. However, I went to the chapel, and, though much diftreffed, I addreffed the reverend gentleman, thinking, if I was not right, he would endeavour to convince me of it. When I converfed with him, the first thing he asked me was, what I knew of Chrift? I told him I believed in him, and had been baptized in his name. 'Then,' faid he, 'when • were you brought to the knowledge of • God? and how were you convinced of fin?' I knew not what he meant by these questions; I told him I kept eight commandments out of ten; but that I fometimes fwore on board ship, and fometimes when on shore, and broke the sabbath. He then asked me if I could read? I anfwered, 'Yes.'--' Then,' faid he, ' do you not read in the bible, ' he that offends in one point is guilty 'of all?' I faid, 'Yes.' Then he affured assured me, that one fin unatoned for was as fufficient to damn a foul as one leak was to fink a ship. Here I was struck with a we; for the minister exharted me much, and reminded me of the flortness of time. and the length of eternity, and that no unregenerate foul, or any thing unclean, could enter the kingdom of Heaven. He did not admit me as a communicant; but recommended me to read the. feriptures, and hear the word preached, not to neglect fervent prayer to God, who has promifed to hear the fupplications of those who seek him in godly lincerity; so I took my leave of him, with many thanks, and refolved to follow his advice, fo far as the Lord would condefcend to enable me. During this time I was out of employ, nor was I likely to get a fituation fuitable for me, which obliged me to go once more to fea. I engaged as steward of a ship called the Hope, Capt. Richard Strange, bound bound from London to Cadiz in Spain. In a short time after I was on board I heard the name of God much blafphemed, and I feared greatly, left I should catch the horrible infection. I thought if 1 finned again, after having life and death fet evidently before me, I should certainly go to hell. My mind was uncommonly chagrined, and I murmured much at God's providential dealings with me, and was discontented with the commandments, that I could not be faved by what I had done; I hated all things, and wished I had never been born; confusion feized me, and I wifhed to be annihilated. One day I was flanding on the very edge of the ftern of the ship, thinking to drown myfelf; but this fcripture was inftantly impressed on my mind-' that no murederer hath eternal life abiding in f him,' 1 John iii. 15. Then I paused, and thought myself the unhappiest man man living. Again I was convinced that the Lord was better to me than I deferved, and I was better off in the world than many. After this I began to fear death; I fretted, mourned, and prayed, till I became a burden to others, but more fo to myfelf. At length I concluded to beg my bread on shore rather than go again to fea amongst a people who feared not God, and I entreated the captain three different times to difcharge me; he would not, but each time gave me greater and greater encouragement to continue with him, and all on board thewed me very great civility: notwithstanding all this I was unwilling to embark again. At last fome of my religious friends advised me, by faying it was my lawful calling, confequently it was my duty to obey, and that God was not confined to place, &c. &c. particularly Mr. G. S. the governor of Tothil-fields Bridewell, who pitied my cafe, cafe, and read the eleventh chapter of · the Hebrews to me, with exhortations. He prayed for me, and I believed that he prevailed on my behalf, as my burden was then greatly removed, and I found a heartfelt refignation to the will of God. The good man gave me a pocket Bible and Allen's Alarm to the unconverted. We parted, and the next day I went on board again. We failed for Spain, and I found favour with the captain. It was the fourth of the month of September when we failed from London; we had a delightful voyage to Cadiz, where we arrived the twentythird of the fame month. The place is strong, commands a fine prospect, and is very rich. The Spanish galloons frequent that port, and fome arrived whils we were there. I had many opportunities of reading the fcriptures. I wrestled hard with God in fervent prayer, who had declared in his word that that he would hear the groanings and deep fighs of the poor in fpirit. I found this verified to my utter aftonithment and comfort in the following manner:

[14ī]

[142]

[I43]

[144]

[145]

On the morning of the 6th of October, (I pray you to attend) or all that day, I thought that I should either fee or hear fomething fupernatural. I had a fecret impulse on my mind of something that was to take place, which drove me continually for that time to a throne of grace. It pleafed God to enable me to wreftle with him, as Jacob did : I prayed that if fudden death were to happen, and I perished, it might be at Cixift's feet. In the evening of the fame day, as I was reading and meditating on the fourth chapter of the Acls, twelch verse, under the folemn apprehensions of eternity, and reflecting on my past actions, I began to think I had lived a moral life, and that I had a proper ground to believe Vol. Il. H I had

[146]

I had an interest in the divine favour; but still meditating on the subject, not knowing whether falvation was to be had partly for our own good deeds, or folely as the fovereign gift of God; in this deep confernation the Lord was pleafed to break in upon my foul with his bright beams of heavenly light; and in an inftant as it were, removing the veil, and letting light into a dark place, I faw clearly with the eye of faith the crucified Saviour bleeding on the crofs on mount Calvary: the scriptures became an unsealed book, I saw myself a condemned criminal under the law, which came with its full force to my confcience, and when ' the command-'ment came fin revived, and I died.' I faw the Lord Jefus Chrift in his humiliation, loaded and bearing my reproach, fin, and shame. I then clearly perceived that by the deeds of the law no flesh living could be justified. I was then convinced vinced that by the first Adam fin came, and by the fecond Adam (the Lord Jefus Chrift) all that are faved must be made alive. It was given me at that time to know what it was to be born again, John iii. 5. I faw the eighth chapter to the Romans, and the doctrines of God's decrees, verified agreeable to his eternal, everlasting, and unchangeable purposes. The word of God was fweet to my tafte, yea fweeter than honey and the honeycomb. Chrift was revealed to my foul as the chiefest among ten thousand. These heavenly moments were really as life to the dead, and what John calls an earnest of the Spirit*. This was indeed unspeakable, and I firmly believe undeniable by many. Now every leading providential circumstance that happened to me, from the day I was taken from my parents

[147]

* John xvi. 13, 14. &C. .

[148]

to that hour, was then in my view, as if it had but just then occurred. I was fenfible of the invisible hand of God, which guided and protected me when in truth I knew it not : ftill the Lord pursued me although I flighted and difregarded it; this mercy melted me down. When I confidered my poor wretched state I wept, seeing what a great debtor I was to fovereign free grace. Now the Ethiopian was willing to be saved by Jesus Christ, the finner's only furety, and also to rely on none other perfon or thing for falvation. Self was obnoxious, and good works he had none, for it is God that worketh in us both to will and to do. The amazing things of that hour can never be told-it was joy in the Holy Ghoft! I felt an aftonishing change; the burden of fin, the gaping jaws of hell, and the fears of death, that weighed me down before, now loft their horror; indeed I thought death would would now be the best earthly friend I ever had. Such were my grief and joy as I believe are feldom experienced. I was bathed in tears, and faid, What am I that God fhould thus look on me the vilest of finners? I felt a deep concern for my mother and friends, which occafioned me to pray with fresh ardour; and, in the abyfs of thought, I viewed the unconverted people of the world in a very awful state, being without God and without hope.

I 149]

It pleased God to pour out on me the Spirit of prayer and the grace of fupplication, fo that in loud acclamations I was enabled to praife and glorify his most holy name. When I got out of the cabin, and told fome of the people. what the Lord had done for me, alas, who could understand me or believe my report!---None but to whom the arm of the Lord was revealed. I became a barbarian to them in talking of the love of Chrift: H 3

[150]

Christ: his name was to me as ointment poured forth; indeed it was fweet to my foul, but to them a rock of offence. I thought my cafe fingular, and every hour a day until I came to London, for I much longed to be with fome to whom I could tell of the wonders of God's love towards me, and join in prayer to him whom my foul loved and thirfled after. I had uncommon commotions within, fuch as few can tell aught about. Now the bible was my only companion and comfort; I prized it much, with many thanks to God that I could read it for myfelf, and was not left to be toffed about or led by man's devices and notions. The worth of a foul cannot be told.-May . the Lord give the reader an understanding in this. Whenever I looked in the bible I faw things new, and many texts were immediately applied to me with great comfort, for I knew that to me was the word of falvation fent. Sure I was

[151]

was that the Spirit which indited' the word opened my heart to receive the truth of it as it is in Jefus-that the fame Spirit enabled me to act faith upon the promifes that were fo precious to me, and enabled me to believe to the falvation of my foul. By free grace I was perfuaded that I had a part in the first refurrection, and was ' enlightened with the · light of the living,' Job xxxiii. 30. I withed for a man of God with whom I might converse: my foul was like the shariots of Aminidab, Canticles vi. 1,2. Thefe, among others, were the preciouspromifes that were fo powerfully applied to me : • All things whatfoever ye ' shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall: receive,' Mat. xxi. 22. Peace I: ' leave with you, my peace I give unto • you,' John xiv. 27. I faw the bleffed Redeemer to be the fountain of life, and the well of falvation. I experienced him all in all; he had brought me by a. H 4 way.

[152]

way that I knew not, and he had made crooked paths ftraight. Then in his name I fet up my Eb.nezer, faying, Hitherto ke hath helped me : and could fay to the finners about me, Behold what a Saviour I have? Thus I was, by the teaching of that all-glorious Deity, the great One in Three, and Three in One, confirmed in the truths of the bible, those oracles of everlassing truth, on which every foul living must stand or fall eternally, agreeable to Acts iv. 12. 'Neither is there falvation in • any other, for there is none other • name under heaven given among men ' whereby we must be faved, but only ' Chrift Jefus.' May God give the reader a right understanding in these facts! To him that believeth all things are poftible, but to them that are unbelieving nothing is pure, Titus i. 15. During this period we remained at Cadiz until our flaip got laden. We failed about the

[153]

the fourth of November; and, having a good passage, we arrived in London the month following, to any comfort, with heartfelt gratitude to God for his rich and unspeakable mercies. On my return I had but one text which puzzled me, or that the devil endeavoured to buffet me with, viz. Rom. xi. 6. and, as I had heard of the Reverend Mr. Romaine, and his great knowledge in the scriptures, I wished much to hear him preach. One day I went to Blackfriars church, and, to my great satisfaction and furprife, he preached from that very text. He very clearly shewed the difference between human works and free election, which is according to God's fovereign will and pleafure. These glad tidings set me entirely at liberty, and I went out of the church rejoicing, seeing my spots were those of God's children. I went to Weftminfter Chapel, and faw fome of my o'd friends, H_5 friends, who were glad when they perceived the wonderful change that the Lord had wrought in me, particularly Mr. G - S -, my worthy acquaintance, who was a man of a choice spirit, and had great zeal for the Lord's fervice. I enjoyed his correspondence till he died in the year 1784. I was again examined at that fame chapel, and was received into church fellowship amongst . them: I rejoiced in spirit, making melogy in my heart to the God of all my mercies. Now my whole with was to be diffolved, and to be with Chriftbut, alas! I must wait mine appointed time.

[154]

MISCELLANEOUS

[155]

MICELLANEOUS VERSES, or

Reflections on the State of my mind during my first Convictions; of the Necessity of believing the Truth, and experiencing the inestimable Benefits of Christianity.

WELL may I fay my life has been One feene of forrow and of pain; From early days I griefs have known, And as I grew my griefs have grown:

Dangers were always in my path; And fear of wrath, and fometimes death; While pale dejection in me reign'd I often wept, by grief conftrain'd.

When taken from my native land, By an unjuft and cruel band, How did uncommon dread prevail ! My fighs no more I could conceal.

- ' To ease my mind I often strove,.
- " And tried my trouble to remove :
- · I fung, and utter'd fighs between-

.....~H6

· Bút

· Affay'd to fliffe guilt with fin.

[156]

- But O ! not all that I could do
- ' Would flop the current of my wee;
- ' Conviction still my vileness shew'd ;
- ' How great my guilt-how loft from God!
- ' Prevented, that I could not die,
- * Nor might to one kind refuge fly;
- ' An crphan flate I had to mourn,---
- Forfook by all, and left forlorn."

Those who beheld my downcast mien Could not guess at my woes unseen : They by appearance could not know The troubles that I waded through.

Luft, anger, blafphemy, and pride,
With legions of fuch ills befide,

* Troubled my thoughts,' while doubts and fears. Clouded and darken'd most my years,

- Sighs now no more would be confin'd-
- "They breath'd the trouble of my mind:
- · I wish'd for death, but check'd the word,
- " And often pray'd unto the Lord."

Unhappy, more than fome on earth, I thought the place that gave me birth— Strange thoughts opprefs'd—while I replied "Why not in Ethiopia died ?"

And

[157]

- · A tott'ring fence, a bowing wall,'
- · I thought myself ere fince the fall.'
- · Oft times I mused, nigh despair,
- · While birds melodious fill'd the air :
- · Thrice happy fongsters, ever free,
- How blefs'd were they compar'd to me !?

Thus all things added to my pain, While grief compell'd me to complain; When fable clouds began to rife My mind grew darker than the fkies.

The English nation call'd to leave, How did my breast with forrows heave ! I long'd for rest—cried " Help me, Lord ! " Some mitigation, Lord, afford !"

Yet on, dejected, still I went— Heart-throbbing woes within were pent; Nor land, nor sea, could comfort give, Nothing my anxious mind relieve.

Weary with travail, yet unknown To all but God and felf alone, Numeroùs months for peace I strove, And numerous foes I had to prove.

Inur'd

Ł

-Ť

Inur'd to dangers, griefs, and woes, Train'd up 'midft perils, deaths, and foes, I faid " Must it thus ever be ?----" No quiet is permitted me."

Hard hap, and more than heavy lot ! I pray'd to God " Forget me not— " What thou ordain'ft willing I'll bear ;. " But O! deliver from defpair !"

Strivings and wreftlings feem'd in vain; Nothing I did could eafe my pain: Then gave I up my works and will, Confefs'd and own'd my doom was hell !

Like fome poor pris'ner at the bar, Confcious of guilt, of fin and fear, Arraign'd, and felf-condemned, I flood-• Loft in the world, and in my blood !'

Yet here, 'midst blackest clouds confin'd, A beam from Christ, the day-star, shin'd; Surely, thought I, if Jesus please, He can at once sign my release.

I, ignorant of his rightcousnes, Set up my labours in its place;

- · Forgot for why his blood was shed,
- " And pray'd and fasted in its stead."

[159]

He dy'd for finners — I am one ! Might not his blood for me atone ? Tho' I am nothing elfe but fin, Yet furely he can make me clean ! Thus light came in, and I believ'd ; Myfelf forgot, and help receiv'd ! My Saviour then I know I found, For, eas'd from guilt, no more I groan'd.

O, happy hour, in which I ceas'd To mourn, for then I found a reft! My foul and Chrift were now as one— Thy light, O Jefus, in me fhone! Blefs'd be thy name, for now I know I and my works can nothing do;

- " The Lord alone can ranfom man-
- " For this the spotles Lamb was flain !"

When facrifices, works, and pray'r, Prov'd vain, and ineffectual were, " Lo, then I come !" the Saviour cry'd, And, bleeding, bow'd his head and dy'd !

He dy'd for all who ever faw No help in them, nor by the law : — I this have feen ; and gladly own "Salvation is by Chrift alone *!"

* Acts iv. 12.

CHAP.

[160]

CHAP. XI.

The author embarks on board a ship bound for Cadiz-Is near being spipwrceked -Goes to Malaga-Remarkable fine cathedral there-The author disputes vith a pepific prich-Picking up cleven miferable men at sea in returning to England-Engages again with Doctor Irving to accompany him to Jamaica and the Mofguito Shore-Meets with an Indian prince on board—The author attempts to influet kim in the truths of. the Gospel-Frustrated by the bad example of some in the ship-They arrive on the Mosquito Shore with some slaves they purchased at Jamaica, and begin to cultivate a plantation-Some account of the manners and customs of the Molquito Indians-Successful device of the autl:or's

[161]

ther's to quell a riot among them—Curious entertainment given by them to Doftor Inving and the author, who leaves the flore and goes for Jamaica—Is barbaroufly treated by a man with whom he engaged for his paffage—Efcapes and goes to the Mofquito admiral, who treats him kindly—He gets another veffel and goes on board—Inflances of bad treatment—Meets Doftor Irving—Gets to Jamaica—Is cheated by his captain— Leaves the Doftor and goes for England.

WHEN our fhip was got ready for fea again, I was entreated by the captain to go in her once more; but, as I felt myfelf now as happy as I could with to be in this life, I for fome time refufed; however, the advice of my friends at laft prevailed; and, in full refignation to the will of God, I again cmbarked for Cadiz in March 1775-We 162 We had a very good passage, without any material accident, until we arrived off the Bay of Cadiz; when one Sunday, just as we were going into the harbour, the ship struck against a rock. and knocked off a garboard plank, which is the next to the keel. In an instant all hands were in the greatest confusion, and began with loud crics. to call on God to have mercy on them, Although I could not fwim, and faw no way of escaping death, I felt no dread in my then fituation, having no desire to live. I even rejoiced in spirit, thinking this death would be fudden glory. But the fulnels of time was not yet come. The people near tome were much aftonished in seeing me thus calm and refigned; but I told them of the peace of God, which. through fovereign grace I enjoyed, and: these words were that instant in my mind:

" Chrift.

[163]

- " Chrift is my pilot wife, my compals is his word;
- " My foul each ftorm defies, while I have fuch a " Lord.
 - " I trust his faithfulness and power,
 - " To fave me in the trying hour.
- " Though rocks and quickfands deep through all "my paffage lie,
- "Yet Chrift fhall fafely keep and guide me with "his eye.
 - " How can I fink with fuch a prop,
 - " That bears the world and all things up?"

At this time there were many large Spanish flukers or passage-vessels full of people crossing the channel; who feeing our condition, a number of them came alongfide of us. As many hands as could be employed began to work; fome at our three pumps, and the rest unloading the ship as fast as possible. There being only a fingle rock called the Porpus on which we struck, we soon got off it, and providentially it was then high water, we therefore run the step afhore at the nearest place to keep her from finking. After many tides, with a great a great deal of care and industry, we got her repaired again. When we had difpatched our bufinefs at Cadiz, we went to Gibraltar, and from thence to Malaga, a very pleafant and rich city, where there is one of the finest cathedrals I had ever scen. It had been above fifty years in building, as I heard, though it was not then quite finished; great part of the infide, however, was completed and highly decorated with the richeft marble columns and many fuperb paintings; it was lighted occafionally by an amazing number of wax tapers of different fizes, some of which were as thick as a man's thigh; thefe, however, were only used on some of their grand festivals.

[164]

I was very much flocked at the cuftom of bull-baiting, and other diverfions which prevailed here on Sunday evenings, to the great feandal of Chriftianity and morals. I used to exprefs press my abhorrence of it to a priest whom I met with. I had frequent contests about religion with the reverend father, in which he took great pains to make a profelyte of rie to his church; and I no lefs to convert him to mine. On these occasions I used to produce my Bible, and shew him in what points his church erred. He then faid he had been in England, and that every perfon there read the Bible, which was very wrong; but I anfwered him that Chrift desired us to search the Scriptures. In his zeal for my converfion, he folicited me to go to one of the univerfities in Spain, and declared that I fhould have my education free; and told me, if I got myself made a priest, I might in time become even pope; and that Pope Benedict was a black man. As I was ever defirous of learning, I paused for fome time upon this temptation; and thought thought by being crafty I might catch fome with guile; but I began to think that it would be only hypocrify in me to embrace his offer, as I could not in confeience conform to the opinions of his church. I was therefore enabled to regard the word of God, which fays, ' Come out from amongft them,' and refused Father Vincent's offer. So we parted without conviction on either fide.

[165]

[166]

Having taken at this place fome fine wines, fruits, and money, we proceeded to Cadiz, where we took about two tons more of money, &c. and then failed for England in the month of June. When we were about the north latitude 42, we had contrary wind for feveral days, and the fhip did not make in that time above fix or feven miles ftraight courfe. This made the cap tain exceeding fretful and peevifh : and I was very forry to hear God's moft

[167]

most holy name often blasphemed by him. One day, as he was in that impious mood, a young gentleman on board, who was a passenger, reproached him, and faid he acted wrong; for we ought to be thankful to God for all things, as we were not in want of any thing on board; and though the wind was contary for us, yet it was fair for fome others, who, perhaps, stood in more need of it than we. I immediately feconded this young gentleman with some boldness, and said we had not the least cause to murmur, for that the Lord was better to us than we deferved, and that he had done all things well. I expected that the captain would be very angry with me for fpeaking, but he replied not a word. However, before that time on the following day, being the 21st of June, much to our great joy and aftonifiment, we law the providential hand of 6 our our benign Creator, whole ways with his blind creatures are paft finding out. The preceding night I dreamed that I faw a boat immediately off the starboard main fhrouds; and exactly at half paft one o'clock, the following day at noon, while I was below, just as we had dined in the cabin, the man at the helm cried out, A boat! which bronght my dream that inftant into my mind. I was the first man that jumped on the deck; and, looking from the throuds onward, according to my dream, I descried a little boat at some distance; but, as the waves were high, it was as much as we could do fometimes to difcern her; we however ftopped the fhip's way, and the boat, which was extreme-Jy finall, came alongfide with eleven miferable men, whom we took on board immediately. To all human appearance, these people must have perished in the course of one hour or lefs, the I the boat being finall, it barely contained them. When we took them up they were half drowned, and had no victuals, compass, water, or any other neceffary whatfoever, and had only one bit of an oar to steer with, and that right before the wind; fo that they were obliged to truft entirely to the mercy of the waves. As foon as we got them all on board, they bowed themfelves on their knees, and, with hands and voices lifted up to heaven, thanked God for their deliverance; and I truft that my prayers were not wanting amonglt them at the same time. This mercy of the Lord quite melted me, and I recollected his words, which I faw thus verified in the 107th Pfalm 'O give thanks unto the Lord, ' for he is good, for his mercy endureth ' for ever. Hungry and thirsty, their fouls fainted in them. They cried 'unto Lord in their trouble, and he' Vol. II. Į ^c delivered

[169]

[169]

[170]

- [•] delivered them out of their diftreffes,
- And he led them forth by the right
- way, that they might go to a city of
- · habitation. O that men would praise
- ' the Lord for his goodness and for his
- wonderful works to the children of
- 'men! For he fatisfieth the longing
- foul, and filleth the hungry foul with
- ' goodness.
 - ' Such as fit in darkness and in the
- fhadow of death :
 - ' Then they cried unto the Lord in
- "their trouble, and he faved them out
- ' of their diftreffes. They that go down
- to the fea in ships; that do business
- in great waters: these see the works
 - ' of the Lord, and his wonders in the
 - · deep. Whofo is wife and will ob-
 - · serve these things, even they shall
 - ' underftand the loving kindnefs of the
 - · Lord.
 - The poor diffreffed captain faid, that the Lord is good; for, feeing that

Ŋ

[171]

• that I am not fit to die, he there-' fore gave me a space of time to ' repent.' I was very glad to hear this expression, and took an opportunity when convenient of talking to him on the providence of God. They told us they were Portuguese, and were in a brig loaded with corn, which shifted that morning at five o'clock, owing to which the veffel funk that inftant with two of the crew; and how these eleven got into the boat (which was lashed to the deck) not one of them could tell. We provided them with every neceffary, and brought them all fafe to London: and I hope the Lord gave them repentance unto life eternal. I was happy once more amongst my friends and brethren, till November, when my old friend, the celebrated Doctor Irving, bought a remarkable fine floop, about 150 tons. He had a mind for a new adventure in cultivat-I 2 ing

[172]

ing a plantation at Jamaica and the Musquito Shore; asked me to go with him, and faid that he would truft me with his eftate in preference to any one. By the advice, therefore, of my friends, I accepted of the offer, knowing that the harveft was fully ripe in those parts, and hoped to be the instrument, under God, of bringing some poor finner to my well beloved master, Jesus Christ. Before I embarked, I found with the Doctor four Mulquito Indians, who were chiefs in their own country, and were brought here by some English traders for some selfish ends. One of them was the Mulquito king's son; a youth of about eighteen years of age; and whilft he was here he was baptized by the name of George. They were going back at the government's expense, after having been in England about twelve months, during which they learned to fpeak pretty 6 pretty good English. When I came to talk to them about eight days before we failed, I was very much mortified in finding that they had not frequented any churches fince they were here, to be baptized, nor was any attention paid to their morals. I was very forry for this mock Chriftianity, and had juft an opportunity to take fome of them once to church before we failed. We embarked in the month of November 1775, on board of the floop Morning Star, Captain David Miller, and sailed for Jamaica. In our passage, I took all the pains that I could to instruct the Indian prince in the doctrines of Christianity, of which he was entirely ignorant; and, to my great joy, he was quite attentive, and received with gladnefs the truths that the Lord enabled me to fet forth to him. I taught him in the compass of eleven days all the letters, and he could put even two or 13 three three of them together and fpell them. I had Fox's Martyrology with cuts, and he used to be very fond of looking into it, and would ask many questions about the papal cruelties he faw depicted there, which I explained to him. I made fuch progrefs with this youth, especially in religion, that when I used to go to bed at different hours of the night, if he was in his bed, he would get up on purpose to go to prayer with me, without any other clothes than his shirt; and before he would eat any of his meals amongft the gentlemen in the cabin, he would first come to me to pray, as he called it. I was well pleased at this, and took great delight in him, and used much supplication to God for his conversion. I was in full hope of feeing daily every appearance of that change which I could wish; not knowing the devices of fatan, who had many of his emissaries to fow his tares as

[173]

[174]

[175]

as fast as I fowed the good feed, and pull down as fast as I built up. Thus we went on nearly four fifths of our passage, when satan at last got the upper hand. Some of his messengers, feeing this poor heathen much advanced in piety, began to ask him whether I had converted him to Christianity, laughed, and made their jeft at him, for which I rebuked them as much as I could; but this treatment caused the prince to halt between two opinions. Some of the true fons of Belial, who did not believe that there was any hereafter, told him never to fear the devil, for there was none exifting; and if ever he came to the prince, they defired he might be fent to them. Thus they teazed the poor innocent youth, fo that he would not learn his book any more! He would not drink nor carouse with these ungodly actors, nor would he be with me, I 4 even even at prayers. This grieved me very much. 1 endeavoured to perfuade him as well as I could, but he would not come; and entreated him very much to tell me his reasons for acting thus. At laft he afked me, 'How comes it that ' all the white men on board who can ' read and write, and observe the fun, 'and know all things, yet fwear; lie, ' and get drunk, only excepting yourfelf?' I answered him, the reason was, that they did not fear God; and that if any one of them died fo they could not go to, or be happy with God. He replied, that if these persons went to hell he would go to hell too. I was forry to hear this; and, as he fometimes had the tooth-ach, and also fome other perfons in the ship at the same time, I asked him if their toothach made his eafy: he faid, No. Then I told him if he and these people went to hell together, their pains would not make his his any lighter. This answer had great weight with him: it depressed his fpirits much; and he became ever after, during the passage, fond of being alone. When we were in the latitude of Martinico, and near making the land, one morning we had a brifk gale of wind, and, carrying too much fail, the main-mast went over the side. Many people were then all about the deck, and the yards, masts, and rigging, came tumbling all about us, yet there was not one of us in the least hurt, although fome were within a hair's breadth of being killed : and, particularly, I faw two men then, by the providential hand of God, most miraculoufly preferved from being finashed to picces. On the fifth of January we made Antigua and Montferrat, and ran along the reft of the islands : and on the fourteenth we arrived at Jamaica. One Sunday while we were there I took I_5 the

[176]

[177]

[178]

the Musquito Prince George to church, where he faw the facrament adminiftered. When we came out we faw all kinds of people, almost from the church door for the space of half a mile down to the waterfide, buying and felling all kinds of commodities: and these acts afforded megreat matter of exhortation to this youth, who was much aftonished. Our vessel being ready to fail for the Mulquito shore, I went with the Doctor on board a Guinea-man, to purchase fome flaves to carry with us, and cultivate a plantation; and I chofe them all my own countrymen. On the twelfth of February we sailed from Jamaica, and on the eighteenth arrived at the Musquito shore, at a place called Dupeupy. All our Indian guests now, after I had admonished them and a few cases of liquor given them by the Doctor, took an affectionate leave of us, and went ashore, where they were met by the

[179]

the Mulquito king, and we never law one of them afterwards. We then failed to the fouthward of the fhore, to a place called Cape Gracias a Dios, where there was a large lagoon or lake, which received the emptying of two or three very fine large rivers, and abounded much in fish and land tortoife. Some of the native Indians came on board of us here; and we used them well, and told them we were come to dwell amongst them, which they seemed pleafed at. So the Doctor and I, with fome others, went with them ashore; and they took us to different places to view the land, in order to choofe a place to make a plantation of. We fixed on a fpot near a river's bank, in a rich foil; and, having got our necessaries out of the floop, we began to clear away the woods, and plant different kinds of vegetables; which had a guick growth. While we were employed in this man-Ι6 ¢ ner, ner, our veffel went northward to Black River to trade. While she was there, a Spanish guarda costa met with and took her. This proved very hurtful, and a great embarrassment to us. However, we went on with the culture of the land. We used to make fires every night all around us, to keep off wild beafts, which, as foon as it was dark, set up a most hideous roaring. Our habitation being far up in the woods, we frequently faw different kinds of animals; but none of them ever hurt us, except poifonous fnakes, the bite of which the Doctor used to cure by giving to the patient, as foon as possible, about half a tumbler of firong rum, with a good deal of Cayenne pepper in it. In this manner he cured two natives and one of his own flaves. The Indians were exceedingly fond of the Doctor, and they had good reason for it; for I believe they never had fuch an useful man amongst them.

[180]

[181]

them. They came from all quarters to our dwelling; and fome woolwore, or flat-headed Indians, who lived fifty or fixty miles above our river, and this fide of the South Sea, brought us a good deal of filver in exchange for our goods. The principal articles we could get from our neighbouring Indians, were turtle oil, and thells, little filk grafs, and fome provisions; but they would not work at any thing for us, except fishing; and a few times they affisted to cut some trees down, in order to build us houses; which they did exactly like the Africans, by the joint labour of men, women, and children. I do not recollect any of them to have had more than two wives. Thefe always accompanied their hulbands when they came to our dwelling; and then they generally carried whatever they brought to us, and always squatted down behind their hufbands. Whenever we gave them

[182]

them any thing to eat, the men and their wives ate it feparate. I never faw the least fign of incontinence amongst them. The women are ornamented with beads, and fond of painting themfelves; the men also paint, even to excess, both their faces and fhirts: their favourite colour is red. The women generally cultivate the ground, and the men are all fishermen and canoe makers. Upon the whole, I never met any nation that were so fimple in their manners as these people, or had fo little ornament in their houses. Neither had they, as I ever could learn, one word expressive of an The worst word I ever heard oath. amongst them when they were quarreling, was one that they had got from the English, which was, 'you rascal.' I never faw any mode of worship among them; but in this they were not worfe than their European brethren or neighbours: for I am forry to fay that there was not one

[183]

one white perfon in our dwelling, nor any where elfe that I faw in different places I was at on the shore, that was better or more pious than those unenlightened Indians; but they either worked or flept on Sundays: and, to my forrow, working was too much Sunday's employment with ourfelves; fo much fo, that in fome length of time we really did not know one day from another. This mode of living laid the foundation of my decamping at last. The natives are well made and warlike; and they particularly boaft of having never been conquered by the Spaniards. They are great drinkers of firong liquors when they can get them. We used to distil rum from pine apples, which were very plentiful here; and then we could not get them away from our place. Yet they feemed to be fingular, in point of honesty, above any other nation I was ever amongst. The country

[184]

country being hot, we lived under an open shed, where we had all kinds of goods, without a door or a lock to any one article; yet we flept in fafety, and never loft any thing, or were diffurbed. This furprifed us a good deal; and the Doctor, myself, and others, used to fay, if we were to lie in that manner in Europe we should have our throats cut the first night. The Indian governor goes once in a certain time all about the province or district, and has a number of men with him as attendants and affiftants. He fettles all the differences among the peo le, like the judge here, and is treated with very great refpect He took care to give us timely notice before he came to our habitation, by fending his flick as a token, for rum, fugar, and gunpowder, which we did not refuse sending; and at the fame time we made the utmost preparation to receive his honour and histrain. When he came with his tribe, and

[185]

and all our neighbouring chieftains, we expected to find him a grave reverend judge, folid and fagacious; but instead of that, before he and his gang came in fight, we heard them very clamorous; and they even had plundered fome of our good neighbouring Indians, having intoxicated themselves with our liquor. When they arrived we did not know what to make of our new guefts, and would gladly have dispensed with the honour of their company. However, having no alternative, we feasted them plentifully all the day till the evening; when the governor, getting quite drunk, grew very unruly, and ftruck one of our molt friendly chiefs, who was our nearest neighbour, and also took his gold-laced hat from him. At this a great commotion taken place; and the Doctor interfered to make peace, as we could all understand one another, but to no purpose; and at last they became became fo outrageous that the Doctor; fearing he might get into trouble, left the house, and made the best of his way to the nearest wood, leaving me to do as well as I could among them. I was fo enraged with the Governor, that I could have wifhed to have seen him tied fast to a tree and flogged for his behaviour; but I had not people enough to cope with his party. I therefore thought of a stratagem to appeafe the riot. Recollecting a passage I had read in the life of Columbus, when he was amongst the Indians in Mexico or Peru, where, on some occasion, he frightened them, by telling them of certain events in the heavens, I had recourfe to the fame expedient; and it fucceeded beyond my most fanguine expectations. When I had formed my determination, I went in the midit of them; and, taking hold of the Governor, I pointed up to the heavens.

[186]

[187]

heavens. I menaced him and the reft: I told them God lived there, and that he was angry with them, and they must not quarrel fo; that they were all brothers, and if they did not leave off, and go away quietly, I would take the book (pointing to the Bible), read, and tell God to make them dead. This was fomething like magic. The clamour immediately ceafed, and I gave them fome rum and a few other things; after which they went away peaceably; and the Governor afterwards gave our neighbour, who was called Captain Plafmyah, his hat again. When the Doctor returned, he was exceedingly glad at my fuccess in thus getting rid of our troublefome guests. The Musquito people within our vicinity, out of respect to the Doctor, myfelf and his people, made entertainments of the grand kind, called in their tongue tourrie or dryckbot. The English of this expression is, a feast of drinking about, about, of which it feems a corruption of language. The drink confifted of pine apples roafted, and cafades chewed or beaten in mortars; which, after lying fome time, ferments, and becomes fo ftrong as to intoxicate, when drank in any quantity. We had timely notice given to us of the entertainment. A white family, within five miles of us, told us how the drink was made, and I and two others went before the time to the village, where the mirth was appointed to be held; and there we faw the whole art of making the drink, and also the kind of animals that were to be eaten there. I cannot fay the fight of either the drink or the meat were enticing to me. They had fome thousands of pine apples roafting, which they fqueezed, dirt and all, into a canoe they had there for the Furpose. The casade drink was in beef barrels and other veffels, and looked looked exactly like hog-wash. Men, women, and children, were thus employed in roafting the pine apples, and fqueezing them with their hands. For food they had many land torpins or tortoises, some dried turtle, and three large alligators alive, and tied fast to the trees. I asked the people what they were going to do with thefe alligators; and I was told they were to be eaten. I was much furprifed at this, and went home, not a little difgusted at the preparations. When the day of the feast was come, we took fome rum with us, and went to the appointed place, where we found a great affemblage of these people, who received us very kindly. The mirth had begun before we came; and they were dancing with mufic : and the mufical inftruments were nearly the fame as those of any other sable people; but, as I thought, much lefs melodious than any other nation I ever knew. They had

[188]

[189]

² [190]

ş

had many curious gestures in dancing, and a variety of motions and postures of their bodies, which to me were in no wife attracting. The males danced by themfelves, and the females also by themfelves, as with us. The Doctor shewed his people the example, by immediately joining the women's party, though not by their choice. On perceiving the women difgusted, he joined the males. At night there were great illuminations, by setting fire to many pine trees, while the dryckbot went round merrily by calabashes or gourds : but the liquor might more justly be called eating than drinking. One Owden, the oldest father in the vicinity, was dreffed in a ftrange and terrifying form. Around his body were skins adorned with different kinds of feathers, and he had on his head a very large and high head-piece, in the form of a grenadier's cap, with prickles like a porcupine; and he made a certain noife noife which refembled the cry of an alligator. Our people skipped amongst them out of complaifance, though fome could not drink of their tourrie; but our rum met with cuftomers enough, and was foon gone. The alligators were killed and fome of them roafted. Their manner of roafting is by digging a hole in the earth, and filling it with wood, which they burn to coal, and then they lay flicks acrofs, on which they fet the meat. I had a raw piece of the alligator in my hand: it was very rich: I thought it looked like fresh falmon, and it had a most fragrant smell, but I could not eat any of it. This merry-making at last ended without the least discord in any perfon in the company, although it was made up of different nations and complexions. The rainy feason came on here about the latter end of May, which continued till August very heavily; fo that the rivers were overflowed, flowed, and our provisions then in the ground were washed away. I thought this was in fome measure a judgment upon us for working on Sundays, and it hurt my mind very much. I often wifhed to leave this place and fail for Europe; for our mode of procedure and living in this heathenish form was very irkfome to me. The word of God faith, 'What does it avail a man if 'he gain the whole world, and lofe 'his own foul?' This was much and heavily impressed on my mind; and, though I did not know how to fpeak to the Doctor for my discharge, it was disagreeable for me to flay any longer. But about the middle of June I took courage enough to alk him for it. He was very unwilling at first to grant my request; but I gave him so many reasons for it, that at last he consented to my going, and gave me the following certificate of my behaviour: • The

[191]

[192]

[193]

• The bearer, Guftavus Vaffa, has • ferved me feveral years with firict • honeity, fobriety, and fidelity. I can, • therefore, with juffice recommend him • for thefe qualifications; and indeed in • every refpect I confider him as an ex-• cellent fervant. I do hereby certify • that he always behaved well, and thar • he is perfectly truft-worthy. • CHARLES IRVING.

Mujquito Shore, June 15, 1767.

Though I was much attached to the doctor, I was happy when he confented. I got every thing ready for my departure, and hired fome Indians, with a large canoe, to carry me off. All my poor countrymen, the flaves, when they heard of my leaving them, were very forry, as I had always treated them with care and affection, and did every thing I could to comfort the poor creatures; Vol. II. K and flowed, and our provisions then in the ground were washed away. I thought this was in fome measure a judgment upon us for working on Sundays, and it hurt my mind very much. I often wished to leave this place and fail for Europe; for our mode of procedure and living in this heathenish form was very irkfome to me. The word of God faith, 'What does it avail a man if • he gain the whole world, and lofe 'his own foul?' This was much and heavily impressed on my mind; and, though I did not know how to fpeak to the Doctor for my discharge, it was disagreeable for me to ftay any longer. But about the middle of June I took courage enough to alk him for it. He was very unwilling at first to grant my request; but I gave him fo many reasons for it, that at last he confented to my going, and gave me the following certificate of my behaviour: • The [193]

[192]

The bearer, Guftavus Vafla, has ferved me feveral years with ftrict honefly, fobriety, and fidelity. I can,
therefore, with juffice recommend him
for thefe qualifications; and indeed in
for thefe qualifications; and indeed in every refpect I confider him as an excellent fervant. I do hereby certify that he always behaved well, and that he is perfectly truft-worthy.
CHARLES IRVING.'

Though I was much attached to the doctor, I was happy when he confented. I got every thing ready for my departure, and hired fome Indians, with a large canoe, to carry me off. All my poor countrymen, the flaves, when they heard of my leaving them, were very forry, as I had always treated them with care and affection, and did every thing I could to confort the poor creatures; Vol. II. K and

[194]

and render their condition eafy. Having taken leave of my old friends and companions, on the 18th of June, accompanied by the doctor, I left that fpot of the world, and went fouthward above twenty miles along the river. There I found a floop, the captain of which told me he was going to Jamaica. Having agreed for my passage with him and one of the owners, who was alfo on board, named Hughes, the doctor and I parted, not without sheding tears on both fides. The veffel then failed along the river till night, when the ftopped in a lagoon within the fame river. During the night a schooner belonging to the fame owners came in, and, as the was in want of hands, Hughes, the owner of the floop, afked me to go in the schooner as a failor, and faid he would give me wages. I thanked him; but I faid I wanted to go to Jamaica. He then immediately changed changed his tone, and fwore, and abused me very much, and afked how I came to be freed. I told him, and faid that I came into that vicinity with Dr. Irving, whom he had feen that day. This account was of no ufe; he still fwore exceedingly at me, and curfed the master for a fool that fold me my freedom, and the doctor for another in leting me go from him. Then he defired me to go in the fchooner, or elfe l should not go out of the floop as a freeman. I faid this was very hard, and begged to be put on shore again; but he fwore that I should not. I faid I had been twice amongst the Turks, yet had never feen any fuch ufage with them, and much lefs could I have expected any thing of this kind amongst Chriftians. This incenfed him exceedingly; and, with a volley of oaths and imprecations, he replied, ' Christians! Damn 'you, you are one of St. Paul's men; K 2 • but

[195]

t

٥

[196]

•4

"but by G-, except you have St. ' Paul's or St. Peter's faith, and walk " upon the water to the fhore, you fhall ' not go out of the veilel;' which I now found was going amongst the Spaniards towards Carthagena, where he fwore he would fell me. I fimply afked him what right he had to fell me? but, without another word, he made fome of his people tie ropes round each of my ancles, and also to each wrift, and another rope round my body, and hoifted me up without letting my feet touch or reft upon any thing. Thus I hung, without any crime committed, and without judge or jury; merely becaufe I was a free man, and could not by the law get any redrefs from a white perfon in those parts of the world. I was in great pain from my fituation, and cried and begged very hard for fome mercy; but all in vain. My tyrant, in a great rage, brought a mufquet

[197]

quet out of the cabin, and loaded it before me and the crew, and fwore that he would shoot me if I cried any more. I had now no alternative; I therefore remained silent, seeing not one white man on board who faid a word on my behalf. I hung in that manner from between ten and eleven o'clock at night till about one in the morning; when, finding my cruel abuser fast asleep, I begged some of his flaves to flack the rope that was round my body, that my feet might reft on fomething. This they did at the rifk of being cruelly used by their master, who beat some of them severely at first for not tying me when he commanded them. Whilft I remained in this condition, till between five and fix o'clock next morning, I truft I prayed to God to forgive this blasphemer, who cared not what he did, but when he got up out of His fleep in the morning was of the very fame K 3

[198]

fame temper and disposition as when he left me at night. When they got up the anchor, and the veffel was getting under way, I once more cried and begged to be releafed; and now, being fortunately in the way of their hoifting the fails, they released me. When I was let down, I fpoke to one Mr. Cox, a carpenter, whom I knew on board, on the impropriety of this conduct. He also knew the doctor, and the good opinion he ever had of me. This man then went to the captain, and told him not to carry me away in that manner; that I was the doctor's fleward, who regarded me very highly, and would refent this ufage when he should come to know it. On which he defired a young man to put me ashore in a finall canoe I brought with me. This found gladdened my heart, and I got hasfily into the canoe and fct off, whilft my tyrant was down in the cabin; but he foon soon spied me out, when I was not above thirty or forty yards from the veffel, and, running upon the deck with a loaded musket in his hand, he prefented it at me, and fwore heavily and dreadfully, that he would shoot me that instant, if I did not come back on board. As I knew the wretch would have done as he faid, without hefitation, I put back to the veffel again; but, as the good Lord would have it, just as I was alongfide he was abufing the captain for letting me go from the veffel; which the captain returned, and both of them soon got into a very great heat. The young man that was with me now got out of the canoe; the veffel was failing on fast with a smooth sea: and I then thought it was neck or nothing, so at that instant I set off again, for my life, in the canoe, towards the flore; and fortunately the confusion was fo great amongst them on board, that K 4

[199]

[200]

that I got out of the reach of the mufquet shot unnoticed, while the veffel failed on with a fair wind a different way; fo that they could not overtake me without tacking: but even before that could be done I should have been on shore, which I soon reached, with many thanks to God for this unexpected deliverance. I then went and told the other owner, who lived near that shore (with whom I had agreed for my passage) of the usage I had met with. He was very much aftonished, and appeared very forry for it. After treating me with kindness, he gave me fome refreshment, and three heads of reasted Indian corn, for a voyage of about eighteen miles fouth, to look for another vessel. He then directed me to an Indian chief of a district, who was also the Musquito admiral, and had once been at our dwelling; after which I set off with the canoe across a large lagoon lagoon alone (for I could not get any one to affift me), though I was much jaded, and had pains in my bowels, by means of the rope I had hung by the night before. I was therefore at different times unable to manage the canoe, for the paddling was very laborious. However, a little before dark I got to my deftined place, where fome of the Indians knew me, and received me kindly. I asked for the admiral; and they conducted me to his dwelling. He was glad to fee me, and refreshed me with fuch things as the place afforded; and I had a hammock to fleep in. They acted towards me more like Christians than those whites I was amongst the last night, though they had been baptized. I told the admiral I wanted to go to the next port to get a veiled to carry me to Jamaica; and requested him to send the canoe back which I then had, for which I was to K 5 pay pay him. He agreed with me, and fent five able Indians with a large canoe to carry my things to my intended place, about fifty miles; and we fet off the next morning. When we got out of the lagoon and went along fhore, the fea was fo high that the canoe was oftentimes very near being filled with water. We were obliged to go ashore and drag across different necks of land; we were also two nights in the fwamps, which swarmed with musquito flies, and they proved troublefome to us. This tirefome journey of land and water ended, however, on the third day, to my great joy; and I got on board of a floop commanded by one Captain Jenning. She was then partly loaded, and he told me he was expecting daily to fail for Jamaica; and having agreed with me to work my passage, I went to work accordingly. I was not many days on board before we failed; but to my my sorrow and disappointment, though used to such tricks, we went to the fouthward along the Mulquito shore, instead of steering for Jamaica. I was compelled to affift in cutting a great deal of mahogany wood on the fhore as we coafted along it, and load the veffel with it, before she failed. This fretted me much; but, as I did not know how to help myself among these deceivers, I thought patience was the only remedy I had left, and even that was forced. There was much hard work and little victuals on board, except by good luck we happened to catch turtles. On this coast there was also a particular kind of fish called manatee, which is most excellent eating, and the flesh is more like beef than fish; the scales are as large as a shilling, and the skin thicker than I ever faw that of any other fifh. Within the brackish waters along shore there were likewife vaft numbers of alli-K 6 gators, gators, which made the fifh scarce. I was on board this floop fixteen days, during which, in our coafting, we came to another place, where there was a fmaller floop called the Indian Queen, commanded by one John Baker. He alfo was an Englishman, and had been a long time along the fhore trading for turtle shells and filver, and had got a good quantity of each on board. He wanted fome hands very much; and, understanding I was a free man, and wanted to go to Jamaica, he told me if he could get one or two, that he would fail immediately for that island : he also pretended to me fome marks of attention and respect, and promised to give me forty-five shillings sterling a month if I would go with him. I thought this much better than cutting wood for nothing. I therefore told the other captain that I wanted to go to Jamaica in the other vessel; but he would not liften fiften to me: and, feeing me refolved to go in a day or two, he got the vessel to fail, intending to carry me away against my will. This treatment mortified me extremely. I immediately, according to an agreement I had made with the captain of the Indian Queen, called for her boat, which was lying near us, and it came alongfide; and, by the means of a north-pole shipmate which I met with in the floop I was in, I got my things into the boat, and went on board of the Indian Queen, July the 10th. A few days after I was there, we got all things ready and failed : but again, to my great mortification, this vessel still went to the fouth, nearly as far as Carthagena, trading along the coast, instead of going to Jamaica, as the captain had promifed me: and, what was worft of all, he was a very cruel and bloody-minded man, and was a horrid blasphemer. Among others he

[201]

[202]

[203]

[204]

[205]

[206]

he had a white pilor, one Stoker, whom he beat often as feverely as he did some negroes he had on board. One night in particular, after he had beaten this man most cruelly, he put him into the boat, and made two negroes row him to a defolate key, or fmall island; and he loaded two piftols, and fwore bitterly that he would fhoot the negroes if they brought Stoker on board again. There was not the leaft doubt but that he would do as he faid, and the two poor fellows were obliged to obey the cruel mandate; but, when the captain was afleep, the two negroes took a blanket and carried it to the unfortunate Stoker, which I believe was the means of faving his life from the annoyance of insects. A great deal of entreaty was used with the captain the next day, before he would confent to let Stoker come on board; and when the poor man was brought on board he W2S

[207]

was very ill, from his fituation during the night, and he remained fo till he · was drowned a little time after. As we failed fouthward we came to many uninhabited islands, which were overgrown with fine large cocoa nuts. As I was very much in want of provisions, I brought a boat load of them on board, which lasted me and others for feveral weeks, and afforded us many a delicious repaft in our fcarcity. One day, before this, I could not help obferving the providential hand of God, that ever supplies all our wants, though in the ways and manner we know not. I had been a whole day without food, and made fignals for boats to come off, but in vain. I therefore earneftly prayed to God for relief in my need; and at the close of the evening I went off the deck. Juft as I laid down I heard a noife on the deck; and, not knowing what it meant, I went directly on the the deck again, when what should I ſce fee but a fine large fish about seven or eight pounds, which had jumped aboard! I took it, and admired, with thanks, the good hand of God; and, what I confidered as not lefs extraordinary, the captain, who was very avaricious, did not attempt to take it from me, there being only him and I on board; for the reft were all gone ashore trading. Sometimes the people did not come off for some days: this used to fret the captain, and then he would vent his fury on me by beating me, or making me feel in other cruel ways. One day especially, in his wild, wicked, and mad career, after striking me feveral times with different things, and once acress my mouth, even with a red burning stick out of the fire, he got a barrel of gunpowder on the deck, and fwore that he would blow up the veffel. I was then at my wit's end, and earneftly prayed to God to direct me. The head was out of the barrel, barrel; and the captain took a lighted stick out of the fire to blow himself and me up, because there was a vessel then in fight coming in, which he fupposed was a Spaniard, and he was afraid of falling into their hands. Seeing this I got an axe, unnoticed by him, and placed myself between him and the powder, having resolved in myself as foon as he attempted to put the fire in the barrel to chop him down that instant. I was more than an hour in this fituation; during which he ftruck me often, still keeping the fire in his hand for this wicked purpose. I really should have thought myself justifiable in any other part of the world if I had killed him, and prayed to God, who gave me a mind which refted folely on himfelf. 1 prayed for refignation, that his will might be done; and the following two portions of his holy word, which occurred to my mind, buoyed up

[208]

[209]

[210]

up my hope, and kept me from taking the life of this wicked man. 'He

- hath determined the times before ap-
- ' pointed, and set bounds to our habi-
- f tations,' Acts xvii. 26. And, ' Who
- ' is there amongst you that feareth the
- . Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his
- fervant, that walketh in darkness and
- hath no light? let him truft in the
- * name of the Lord, and stay upon his

• God,' Ifaiah l. 10. And thus by the grace of God I was enabled to do. I found him a prefent help in the time of need, and the captain's fury began to fubfide as the night approached : but I found,

" That he who cannot ftem his anger's tide Doth a wild horfe without a bridle ride."

The next morning we discovered that the veffel which had caused such a fury in the captain was an English sloop. They soon came to an anchor where we were, and, to my no small surprise, I learned learned that Doctor Irving was on board of her on his way from the Mulquito fhore to Jamaica. I was for going immediately to see this old master and friend, but the captain would not suffer me to leave the vessel. I then informed the doctor, by letter, how I was treated, and begged that he would take me out of the floop: but he informed me that it was not in his power, as he was a pafsenger himself; but he sent me some rum and sugar for my own use. I now learned that after I had left the effate which I managed for this gentleman on the Mulquito shore, during which the flaves were well fed and comfortable, a white overseer had supplied my place: this man, through inhumanity and ill-judged avarice, beat and cut the poor flaves most unmercifuily; and the confequence was, that every one got into a large Puriogua canoe, and endeavoured to escape; but not knowing

[211]

[212]

ing where to go, or how to manage the canoe, they were all drowned; in confequence of which the doctor's plantation was left uncultivated, and he was now returning to Jamaica to purchase more flaves and flock it again. On the 14th of October the Indian Queen arrived at Kingfton in Jamaica. When we were unloaded I demanded my wages, which amounted to eight pounds and five shillings sterling; but Captain Baker refused to give me one farthing, although it was the hardest-earned money I ever worked for in my life. I found out Doctor Irving upon this, and acquainted him of the captain's knavery. He did all he could to help me to get my money; and we went to every magistrate in Kingston (and there were nine), but they all refused to do any thing for me, and faid my oatli could not be admitted against a white man. Nor was this all; for Baker threatened 3 uhreatened that he would beat me feverely if he could catch me for attempting to demand my money; and this he would have done, but that I got, by means of Dr. Irving, under the protection of Captain Douglas of the Squirrel man of war. I thought this exceedingly hard usage; though indeed I found it to be too much the practice there to pay free men for their labour in this manner. One day I went with a free negroe taylor, named Joe Diamond, to one Mr. Cochran, who was indebted to him some triffing sum; and the man, not being able to get his money, began to murmur. The other immediately took a horfe-whip to pay him with it; but, by the help of a good pair of heels, the taylor got off. Such oppreffions as these made me seek for a veffel to get off the island as fast as I could; and by the mercy of God I found a ship in November bound for England,

[214]

England, when I embarked with a convoy, after having taken a last farewell of Doctor Irving. When I left Jamaica he was employed in refining fugars; and some months after my arrival in England I learned, with much forrow, that this my amiable friend was dead, owing to his having eaten some poisoned fish. We had many very heavy gales of wind in our passage; in the course of which no material incident occurred, except that an American privateer, falling in with the fleet, was captured and fet fire to by his Majesty's ship the Squirrel. On January the feventli, 1777, we arrived at Plymouth. I was happy once more to tread upon English ground; and, after passing some little time at Plymouth and Exeter among some pious friends, whom I was happy to see, I went to London with a heart replete with thanks to God for all past mercies.

CHAP.

L 215]

CHAP. XII.

Different transactions of the author's life till the prefent time—His application to the late Biscop of London to be appointed a missionary to Africa—Some account of his share in the conduct of the late expedition to Sierra Leona—Petition to the Queen—Conclusion.

SUCH were the various fcenes which I was a witnefs to, and the fortune I experienced until the year 1777. Since that period my life has been more uniform, and the incidents of it fewer, than in any other equal number of years preceding; I therefore haften to the conclusion of a narrative, which I fear the reader my think already fufficiently tedious.

I had

[216]

I had fuffered fo many impofitions in my commercial transactions in different parts of the world, that I became heartily difgusted with the seafaring life, and I was determined not to return to it, at least for some time. I therefore once more engaged in fervice shortly after my return, and continued for the most part in this situation until 1784.

Soon after my arrival in London, I faw a remarkable circumftance relative to African complexion, which I thought fo extraordinary, that I beg leave juft to mention it : A white negro woman, that I had formerly feen in London and other parts, had married a white man, by whom fhe had three boys, and they were every one mulattoes, and yet they had fine light hair. In 1779 I ferved Governor Macnamara, who had been a confiderable time on the coaft of Africa. In the time of my fervice fervice, I used to ask frequently other fervants to join me in family prayers; but this only excited their mockery. However, the Governor, understanding that I was of a religious turn, wished to know of what religion I was; I told him I was a protestant of the church of England, agreeable to the thirtynine articles of that church, and that whomfoever I found to preach according to that doctrine, those I would hear. A few days after this, we had fome more discourse on the same subject : the Governor spoke to me on it again, and said that he would, if I chofe, as he thought I might be of service in converting my countrymen to the Gospel faith, get me sent out as a missionary to Africa. I at first refused going, and told him how I had been ferved on a like occafion by fome white people the last voyage I went to Jamaica, when I atrempted (if it were the will of God) to be Vol. II. the the means of converting the Indian prince; and I faid I fuppofed they would ferve me worfe than Alexander the copperfmith did St. Paul, if I fhould attempt to go amongft them in Africa. He told me not to fear, for he would apply to the Bifhop of London to get me ordained. On thefe terms I confented to the Governor's propofal to go to Africa, in hope of doing good if poffible amongft my countrymen; fo, in order to have me fent out properly, we immediately wrote the following letters to the late Bifhop of London :

[217]

[218]

To the Right Reverend Father in God, ROBERT, Lord Bishop of London:

The MEMORIAL of Gustavus Vassa Sheweth That your memorialift

is a native of Africa, and has a knowledge of the manners and cuftoms of the inhabitants of that country.

That

[219]

That your memorialist has refided in different parts of Europe for twentytwo years last pass, and embraced the Christian faith in the year 1759.

That your memorialist is desirous of returning to Africa as a millionary, if encouraged by your Lordship, in hopes of being able to prevail upon his countrymen to become Christians; and your memorialist is the more induced to undertake the fame, from the fucces that has attended the like undertakings when encouraged by the Portuguese through their different settlements on the coaft of Africa, and also by the Dutch : both governments encouraging the blacks, who, by their education are qualified to undertake the fame, and are found more proper than European clergymen, unacquainted with the language and cuftoms of the country.

Your memorialist's only motive for L 2 foliciting [220]

foliciting the office of a miflionary is, that he may be a means, under God, of reforming his countrymen and perfuading them to embrace the Chriftian religion. Therefore your memorialift humbly prays your Lordship's encouragement and support in the undertaking.

GUSTAVUS VASSA.

At Mr. Guthrie's, taylor, No. 17, Hedge-lane.

MY LORD,

I HAVE refided near feven years on the coaft of Africa, for most part of the time as commanding officer. From the knowledge I have of the country and it's inhabitants, I am inclined to think that the within plan will be attended with great fuccefs, if countenanced by your Lordship. I beg leave further to reprefent to your Lordship, that the like attempts, when encouraged by other governments,

[221]

ments, have met with uncommon fuccels; and at this very time I know a very refpectable character a black prieft at Cape Coaft Caffle. I know the within named Guftavus Vaffa, and believe him a moral good man. I have the honour to be, My Lord, Your Lordfhip's Humble and obedient fervant, MATT. MACNAMARA. Grove, 11th March 1779.

This letter was also accompanied by the following from Doctor Wallace, who had refided in Africa for many years, and whose sentiments on the subject of an African mission were the fame with Governor Macnamara's.

March 13, 1779. Mr Lord, I have refided near five years on Senegambia on the coaft of Africa, L 3 and [222] and have had the honour of filling very confiderable employments in that province. I do approve of the within plan, and think the undertaking very laudable and proper, aud that it deferves your Lordfhip's protection and encouragement, in which cafe it must be attended with the intended fuccess. I am, My Lord, Your Lordfhip's

Humble and obedient servant,

THOMAS WALLACE.

With thefe letters, I waited on the Bifhop by the Governor's defire, and prefented them to his Lordfhip. He received me with much condefcention and politenefs; but, from fome certain fcruples of delicacy, declined to ordain me.

My fole motive for thus dwelling on this transaction, or inferting these papers, papers, is the opinion which gentlemen of fenfe and education, who are acquainted with Africa, entertain of the probability of converting the inhabitants of it to the faith of Jefus Chrift, if the attempt were countenanced by the legiflature.

[223]

Shortly after this I left the Governor, and ferved a nobleman in the Devonthire militia, with whom I was encamped at Coxheath for fome time; but the operations there were too minute and uninteresting to make a detail of.

In the year 1783 I vifited eight counties in Wales, from motives of curiofity. While I was in that part of the country I was led to go down into a coal-pit in Shropfhire, but my curiofity nearly coft me my life; for while I was in the pit the coals fell in, and buried one poor man, who was not far from me: upon this I got out as faft L 3 as

as I could, thinking the furface of the carth the fafeft part of it.

In the fpring 1784 I thought of visiting old ocean again. In confequence of this I embarked as fleward on board a fine new ship called the London, commanded by Martin Hopkin, and failed for New-York. I admired this city very much; it is large and well-built, and abounds with provifions of all kinds. While we lay here a circumstance happened which I thought extremely fingular :--- One day a malefactor was to be executed on a gallows; but with a condition that if any woman, having nothing on but her shift, married the man under the gallows, his life was to be faved. This extraordinary privilege was claimed; a woman prefented herfelf; and the marriage ceremony was performed. Our ship having got laden we returned to London in January 1785. When fhe fhe was ready again for another voyage, the captain being an agreeable man, I failed with him from hence in the fpring, March 1785, for Philadelphia. On the fifth of April we took our departure from the Land's-end, with a pleafant gale; and about nine o'clock that night the moon shone bright, and the fea was fmooth, while our ship was going free by the wind, at the rate of about four or five miles an hour. At this time another thip was going nearly as faft as we on the oppofite point, meeting us right in the teeth, yet none on board observed either ship until we ftruck each other forcibly head and head, to the aftonishment and confternation of both crews. She did us much damage, but I believe we did her more; for when we passed by each other, which we did very quickly, they called to us to bring to, and holft out our boat, but we had L_5 had enough to do to mind ourfelves; and in about eight minutes we faw no more of her. We refitted as well as we could the next day, and proceeded on our voyage, and in May arrived at Philadelphia. I was very glad to fee this favourite old town once more; and my pleafure was much increased in seing the worthy quakers freeing and eafing the burthens of many of my oppressed African brethren. It rejoiced my heart when one of these friendly people took me to see a free-school they had erected for every denomination of black people, whole minds are cultivated here and forwarded to virtue; and thus they are made useful members of the community. Does not the fuccefs of this practice fay loudly to the planters in the language of scripture-"Go ye and do likewife?"

[225]

] 226]

In October 1785 I was accompanied by fome of the Africans, and prefented this this addrefs of thanks to the gentlemen called Friends or Quakers, in Gracechurch-Court Lombard-Street:

GENTLEMEN,

By reading your book, entitled a Caution to Great Britain and her Colonies, concerning the Calamitous State of the enflaved Negroes: We the poor, oppreffed, needy, and much-degraded negroes, desire to approach you with this address of thanks, with our inmost love and warmest acknowledgment; and with the deepeft sense of your benevolence, unwearied labour, and kind interpolition, towards breaking the yoke of flavery, and to administer a little comfort and ease to thousands and tens of thousands of very grievoully afflicted, and too heavy burthened negroes.

Gentlemen, could you, by perfeverance, at laft be enabled, under God, to lighten in any degree the L6 heavy

[228]

heavy burthen of the afflicted, no doubt it would, in fome measure, be the possible means, under God, of faving the fouls of many of the oppreffors; and, if fo, fure we are that the God, whose eyes are ever upon all his creatures, and always rewards every true act of virtue, and regards the prayers of the oppressed, will give to you and yours those bleffings which it is not in our power to express or conceive, but which we, as a part of those captived, opprefied, and afflicted people, most earneftly with and pray for.

These gentlemen received us very kindly, with a promise to exert themselves on behalf of the oppressed Africans, and we parted.

While in town I chanced once to be invited to a quaker's wedding. The fimple and yet expressive mode used at their folemnizations is worthy of note. The following is the true form of it : After

[229]

After the company have met they have scalonable exhortations by several of the members; the bride and bridegroom stand up, and, taking each other by the hand in a folemn manner, the man audily declares to this purpose: " Friends, in the fear of the Lord, and in the prefence of this affembly, whom I desire to be my witnesse, I take this my friend, M. N. to be my wife; promifing, through divine affiftance, to be unto her a loving and faithful husband till death separate us :" and the woman makes the like declaration. Then the two first sign their names to the record, and as many more witneffes as have a mind. I had the honour to subscribe mine to a register in Gracechurch-Court, Lombard-Street. We returned to London in August; and our ship not going immediately to fea, I shipped as a steward in an American ship called the Harmony, Captain John

[230]

John Willet, and left London in March 1786, bound to Philadelphia. Eleven days after failing we carried our foremast away. We had a nine weeks paffage, which caufed our trip not to fucceed well, the market for our goods proving bad; and, to make it worfe, my commander began to play me the like tricks as others too often practife on free negroes in the Weft Indies. But I thank God I found many friends here, who in fome measure prevented him. On my return to London in August I was very agreeably surprised to find that the benevolence of government had adopted the plan of some philanthropic individuals to fend the Africans from hence to their native quarter; and that fome veffels were then engaged to carry them to Sierra Leone; an act which redounded to the honour of all concerned in its promotion, and filled me with prayers and much much rejoicing. There was then in the city a select committee of gentlemen for the black poor, to some of whom I had the honour of being known; and, as foon as they heard of my arrival they fent for me to the committee. When I came there they informed me of the intention of government; and as they feemed to think me qualified to fuperintend part of the undertaking, they asked me to go with the black poor to Africa. I pointed out to them many objections to my going; and particularly I expressed some difficulties on the account of the flave dealers, as I would certainly oppose their traffic in the human species by every means in my power. However these objections were over-ruled by the gentlemen of the committee, who prevailed on me to go, and recommended me to the honourable Comffinioners of his Majeity's Navy as a proper person to act as commiflary [232] miffary for government in the intended expedition; and they accordingly appointed me in November 1786 to that office, and gave me fufficient power to act for the government in the capacity of commiffary, having received my warrant and the following order.

[231]

By the principal Officers and Commillioners of his Maichy's Naty.

WHEREAS you were directed, by our warrant of the 4th of laft month, to receive into your charge from Mr. Irving the furplus provisions remaining of what was provided for the voyage, as well as the provisions for the fupport of the black poor, after the landing at Sierra Leone, with the cloathing, tools, and all other articles provided at government's expense; and as the provisions were laid in at the rate of two months for the voyage, and for

[233]

for four months after the landing, but the number embarked being fo much lefs than was expected, whereby there may be a confiderable surplus of provisions, cloathing, &c. Thefe are, in addition to former orders, to direct and require you to appropriate or dispose of fuch furplus to the beft advantage you can for the benefit of government, keeping and rendering to us a faithful account of what you do herein. And for your guidance in preventing any white perfons going, who are not intended to have the indulgence of being carried thither, we fend you herewith a lift of those recommended by the Committee for the black poor as proper perfons to be permitted to embark, and acquaint you that you are not to fuffer any others to go who do not produce a certificate from the committee for the black poor, of their having their permiffion for it. For which this shall be your [234] your warrant. Dated at the Navy Office, January 16, 1787. J. HINSLOW, GEO. MARSH, W. PALMER. To Mr. Guftavus Vaffa, Commifiary of Provifions and Stores for the Black Poor going to Sierra Leone.

I proceeded immediately to the execution of my duty on board the veffels deftined for the voyage, where I continued till the March following.

During my continuance in the employment of government, I was ftruck with the flagrant abufes committed by the agent, and endeavoured to remedy them, but without effect. One inftance, among many which I could produce, may ferve as a fpecimen. Government had ordered to be provided all neceffaries (flops, as they are called, included)

[235]

ed) for 750 perfons; however, not being able to muster more than 426, I was ordered to fend the fuperfluous flops, &c. to the king's flores at Portfmouth; but, when I demanded them for that purpose from the agent, it appeared they had never been bought, though paid for by government. But that was not all, government were not the only objects of peculation; these poor people fuffered infinitely more; their accommodations were most wretched; many of them wanted beds, and many more cloathing and other necessaries. For the truth of this, and much more, I do not feek credit from my own affertion. I appeal to the teffimony of Capt. Thompson, of the Nautilus, who convoyed us, to whom I applied in February 1787 for a remedy, when I had remonstrated to the agent in vain, and even brought him to be a witnefs of the injuffice and oppression I complained of.

[236]

of. I appeal also to a letter written by these wretched people, so early as the beginning of the preceding January, and published in the Morning Herald of the 4th of that month, figned by twenty of their chiefs.

I could not filently fuffer government to be thus cheated, and my countrymen plundered and oppressed, and even left destitute of the necessaries for almost their existence. I therefore informed the Commissioners of the Navy of the agent's proceeding; but my difmission was soon after procured, by means of a gentleman in the city, whom the agent, confcious of his peculation, had deceived by letter, and whom, moreover, empowered the fame agent to receive on board, at the government, expense, a number of persons as pasfengers, contrary to the orders I received. By this I fuffered a confiderable lofs in my property : however, the commillioners missioners were satisfied with my conduct, and wrote to Capt. Thompson, expressing their approbation of it.

[237]

Thus provided, they proceeded on their voyage; and at last, worn out by treatment, perhaps not the most mild, and wasted by fickness, brought on by want of medicine, cloaths, bedding, &c. they reached Sierra Leone just at the commencement of the rains. At that feason of the year it is imposfible to cultivate the lands; their provisions therefore were exhausted before they could derive any benefit from agriculture; and it is not furprifing that many, especially the lascars, whose constitutions are very tender, and who had been cooped up in ships from October to June, and accommodated in the manner I have mentioned, should be fo wafted by their confinement as not long to furvive it.

Thus ended my part of the longtalked-of expedition to Sierra Leone;

[238]

an expedition which, however unfortunate in the event, was humane and politic in its defign, nor was its failure owing to government: every thing was done on their part; but there was evidently fufficient milmanagement attending the conduct and execution of it to defeat its fuccels.

I fhould not have been fo ample in my account of this transfaction, had not the fhare I bore in it been made the fubject of partial animadversion, and even my difmission from my employment thought worthy of being made by fome a matter of public triumph*. The motives which might influence any perfon to defeend to a petty contest with an obfeure African, and to feek gratification by his depression, perhaps it is not proper here to inquire into or relate, even if its detection were neceffary to my vindication; but I thank

• See the Public Advertifer, July 14, 1787. 6 Heaven

[239]

Heaven it is not. I with to fland by my own integrity, and not to fhelter myfelf under the impropriety of another; and I truft the behaviour of the Commissioners of the Navy to me entitle me to make this affertion; for after I had been difmissed, March 24, I drew up a memorial thus:

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commillioners of his Majelly's Treasury :

The Memorial and Petition of GUSTAVUS VASSA a black Man, late Commissary to the black Poor going to AFRICA.

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

THAT your Lordships' memorialist was, by the Honourable the Commissioners of his Majesty's Navy, on the 4th of December last, appointed to the above employment by warrant from that board;

That

[240]

That he accordingly proceeded to the execution of his duty on board of the Vernon, being one of the fhips appointed to proceed to Africa with the above poor;

That your memorialist, to his great grief and astonishment, received a letter of difmission from the Honourable Commissioners of the Navy, by your Lordships' orders;

That, confcious of having acted with the moft perfect fidelity and the greateft affiduity in difcharging the truft repofed in him, he is altogether at a lofs to conceive the reafons of your Lordhips' having altered the favourable opinion you were pleafed to conceive of him, fenfible that your Lordfhips would not proceed to fo fevere a measure without fome apparent good caufe; he therefore has every reason to believe that his conduct has been grofsly misrepresented to your Lordfhips,

[241]

ships; and he is the more confirmed in his opinion, becaufe, by oppofing meafures of others concerned in the fame expedition, which tended to defeat your Lordships' humane intentions, and to put the government to a very confiderable additional expense, he created a number of enemies, whose misrepresentations, he has too much reason to believe, laid the foundation of his difmission. Unsupported by friends, and unaided by the advantages of a liberal education, he can only hope for redrefs from the justice of his cause, in addition to the mortification of having been removed from his employment, and the advantage which he reafonably might have expected to have derived therefrom. He has had the misfortune to have funk a confiderable part of his little property in fitting himfelf out, and in other expenses arising out of his fituation, an account of which he here Vol. II. M annexes, annexes. Your memorialist will not trouble your Lordships with a vindication of any part of his conduct, because he knows not of what crimes he is accufed; he, however, earneftly entreats that you will be pleafed to direct an inquiry into his behaviour during the time he afted in the public fervice; and, if it be found that his difmiflion arose from false representations, he is confident that in your Lordships' justice he shall find redress

242

Your petitioner therefore humbly prays that your Lordships will take his cafe into confideration, and that you will be pleased to order payment of the above referred-to account, amounting to 321. 4s. and also the wages intended, which is most humbly submitted.

London, May 12, 1787.

The above petition was delivered into the hands of their Lordships, who were were kind enough, in the fpace of fome few months afterwards, without hearing, to order me 50l. fterling—that is, 18l. wages for the time (upwards of four months) I acted a faithful part in their fervice. Certainly the fum is more than a free negro would have had in the weftern colonies!!!

March the 21st, 1788, I had the honour of presenting the Queen with a petition on behalf of my African brethren, which was received moft gracioufly by her Majefty*:

To the QUEEN's most Excellent Majesly.

MADAM,

Your Majefty's well known benevolence and humanity emboldens

* At the request of some of my most particular friends, I take the liberty of inferting it here.

M 2 me

[244]

me to approach your royal prefence, trufting that the obfcurity of my fituation will not prevent your Majefty from attending to the fufferings for which I plead.

Yet I do not folicit your royal pity for my own diftres; my sufferings, although numerous, are in a measure forgotten. I supplicate your Majesty's compation for millions of my African countrymen, who groan under the lafh of tyranny in the Weft Indies. The opprefion and cruelty exercised to the unhappy negroes there, have at length reached the British legislature, and they are now deliberating on its redrefs; even several persons of property in flaves in the Weft Indies, have petitioned parliament against its continuance, sensible that it is as impolitic as it is unjust-and what is inhuman must ever be unwife.

Your Majesty's reign has been hitherto therto diftinguished by private acts of benevolence and bounty; furely the more extended the misery is, the greater claim it has to your Majefty's compassion, and the greater must be your Majesty's pleasure in administering to its relief.

[245]

I presume, therefore, gracious Queen, to implore your interposition with your royal confort, in favour of the wretched Africans; that, by your Majesty's benevolent influence, a period may now be put to their misery; and that they may be raised from the condition of brutes, to which they are at prefent degraded, to the rights and fituation of freemen, and admitted to partake of the bleffings of your Majesty's happy government; so shall your Majesty enjoy the heart-felt pleafure of procuring happiness to millions, and be rewarded in the grateful prayers of themselves, and of their posterity. And M 3

[246]

And may the all-bountiful Creator flower on your Majefty, and the Royal Family, every bleffing that this world can afford, and every fulnefs of joy which divine revelation has promifed us in the next.

I am your Majesty's most dutiful and devoted servant to command, GUSTAVUS VASSA, The Oppressed Ethiopean:

No. 53, Baldwin's Gardens.

The negro confolidated act, made by the affembly of Jamaica laft year, and the new act of amendment now in agitation there, contain a proof of the existence of those charges that have been made against the planters relative to the treatment of their flaves.

I hope to have the fatisfaction of feeing the renovation of liberty and juffice

[247]

justice resting on the British government, to vindicate the honour of our common nature. These are concerns which do not perhaps belong to any particular office: but, to speak more ferioufly to every man of fentiment, actions like these are the just and sure foundation of future fame; a reversion, though remote, is coveted by some noble minds as a substantial good. It is upon these grounds that I hope and expect the attention of gentlemen in power. These are designs consonant to the elevation of their rank, and the dignity of their stations: they are ends fuitable to the nature of a free and generous government; and, connected with views of empire and dominion, fuited to the benevolence and folial merit of the legislature. It is a purfuit of substantial greatness.---May the time come-at least the speculation to me is pleafing-when the fable people shall M 4

e

[248]

shall gratefully commemorate the auspicious æra of extensive freedom. Then shall those persons * particularly be named with praise and honour, who generoufly proposed and stood forth in the cause of humanity, liberty, and good policy; and brought to the ear of the legislature defigns worthy of royal patronage and adoption. May Heaven make the British senators the difperfers of light, liberty, and science, to the uttermost parts of the earth: then will be glory to God on the highest, on earth peace, and good-will to men :-Glory, hondur, peace, &c. to every foul of man that worketh good, to the Britons first, (because to them the Gospel is preached) and also to the nations. 'Those that honour - . -

• Grenville Sharp, Esq; the Reverend Thomas Clarkson; the Reverend James Ramsay; our approved friends, men of virtue, are an honour to their country, ornamental to human nature, happy in themselves, and benefactors to mankind!

their

6

[249]

their Maker have mercy on the

- poor.' It is righteoufnefs exalteth a
- nation; but fin is a reproach to any
- · people; destruction shall be to the
- workers of iniquity, and the wicked

hall fall by their own wickednefs.' May the bleffings of the Lord be upon the heads of all those who commiferated the cases of the oppressed negroes, and the fear of God prolong their days; and may their expectations be filled with gladness!

- beral things, and by liberal things shall
- stand,' Isaiah xxxii. 8. They can fay with pious Job, • Did not I weep for
- him that was in trouble? was not my
- foul grieved for the poor?' Job xxx. 25. As the inhuman traffic of flavery is to be taken into the confideration of the British legislature, I doubt not, if a system of commerce was established in Africa, the demand for manufactures would most rapidly augment, as the native inhabitants will infenfibly adopt the British fashions, manners, customs, &c. In proportion to the civilization, fo will be the confumption of British manufactures.

[250][.]

The wear and tear of a continent, nearly twice as large as Europe, and rich in vegetable and mineral productions, is much eafier conceived than calculated.

A cafe in point.—It coft the Aborigines of Britain little or nothing in clothing, &c. The difference between their forefathers and the prefent generation, in point of confumption, is literally infinite. The fuppofition is most obvious. It will be equally immense in Africa—The same cause, viz. civilization, will ever have the same effect.

It is trading upon fafe grounds. A commercial intercourfe with Africa opens an inexhaustible fource of wealth to

[251]

to the manufacturing interests of Great Britain, and to all which the flave trade is an objection.

Ť

If I am not mifinformed, the manufacturing interest is equal, if not superior, to the landed interest, as to the value, for reasons which will foon appear. The abolition of flavery, fo diabolical, will give a moft rapid extenfion of manufactures, which is totally and diametrically opposite to what fome interested people assert. The manufacturers of this country must and will, in the nature and reason of things, have a full and conftant employ by fupplying the African markets. Population, the bowels and furface of Africa, abound in valuable and useful returns; the hidden treasures of centuries will be brought to light and into circulation. Industry, enterprize, and mining, will have their full fcope, proportionably [252] portionably as they civilize. In a word, it lays open an endlefs field of commerce to the British manufactures and merchant adventurer. The manufacturing interest and the general interests are fynonymous. The abolition of flavery would be in reality an universal good.

Tortures, murder, and every other imaginable barbarity and iniquity, are practifed upon the poor flaves with im-Punity. I hope the flave trade will be abolished. I pray it may be an event at hand. The great body of manufacturers, uniting in the cause, will confiderably facilitate and expedite it; and, as I have already stated, it is most subftantially their interest and advantage, and as fuch the nation's at large, (except those perfons concerned in the manufacturing neck-yokes, collars, chains, hand-cuffs, leg-bolts, drags, thumbfciews, iron muzzles, and coffins; cats, fcourges, Icourges, and other inftruments of torture used in the flave trade). In a flort time one fentiment alone will prevail, from motives of interest as well as justice and humanity. Europe contains one hundred and twenty millions of inhabitants. Query—How many millions doth Africa contain ? Supposing the Africans, collectively and individually, to expend 51. a head in raiment and furniture yearly when civilized, &c. an immensity beyond the reach of imagination !

[253]

This I conceive to be a theory founded upon facts, and therefore an infallible one. If the blacks were permitted to remain in their own country,' they would double themfelves every fifteen years. In proportion to fuch increase will be the demand for manufactures. Cotton and indigo grow fpontaneously in most parts of Africa; a confideration this of no fmall confequence [254] fequence to the manufacturing towns of Great Baitain. It opens a most immense, glorious, and happy prospectthe clothing, &c. of a continent ten thousand miles in circumference, and immensely rich in productions of every denomination in return for manufactures.

I have only therefore to request the reader's indulgence and conclude. I am far from the vanity of thinking there is any merit in this narrative : I hope cenfure will be fuspended, when it is confidered that it was written by one who was as unwilling as unable to adorn .the plainnefs of truth by the colouring of imagination. My life and fortune have been extremely chequered, and my adventures various. Even those I have related are confiderably abridged. If any incident in this little work should appear uninteresting and trifling to most readers, I can only fay, as my excufe excuse for mentioning it, that almost every event of my life made an impreffion on my mind and influenced my conduct. I early accuftomed myfelf to look for the hand of God in the minuteft occurrence, and to learn from it a leffon of morality and religion; and in this l'ght every circumstance I have related was to me of importance. After all, what makes any event important, unless by its observation we become better and wifer, and learn ' to do 'juffly, to love mercy, and to walk • humbly before God?' To those who are possessed of this spirit, there is fcarcely any book or incident fo trifling that does not afford fome profit, while to others the experience of ages feems of no use; and even to pour out to them the treasures of wildom is throwing the jewels of instruction away.

[255]

THE END.

.

VOL. I. ERRATA.

Page Linc
6 14 for Embrence read Embrenche.
14 1 for food read drink.
31 4 for fortune alfo, read fortunate, alfo.
72 7 for loofe read long.
108 8 for her read him.
132 17 dele now.
168 In the Note, after Bayonne read were.
246 17 for even read near.

-

	OL. II. ERRATA.
Pige 9 49 193 204 232 236	Line 3 for with read in. 1 for and read that. 1 last line, between him and all insert to be. 11 for 1767 read 1776. 16 between to and me insert shew. 13 for Mr. Irving read Mr. Joseph Irwin. 14 for whom read who.
248	Note for Grenville read Granville.

.

1

Equiano, Olaudah. The interesting narrative of the life of Olaudah Equiano; or, Gustavus Vassa, the African, written by himself. Vol. 2, Printed for and sold by the author, [1789]. The Making of the Modern World, http://tinyurl.galegroup.com/tinyurl/6omHj0. Accessed 30 July 2018.